"Unfitted fit" marks new Italian fashions

By PATRICIA GREEN

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — Patrick de Barentzen spun the fashion wheel back to chemises Monday.

The Rome designer went overboard for an unfitted fit in his first show at Florence's Pitti Palace. He presented a young, vivacious collection that was mostly collarless, sleeveless, low-waisted and loosely fitted. His clothes were unhampered by belted waists, narrow skirts or binding sleeves.

Coats were seven-eights length glass bell shapes, with slits for the arms and sometimes capes for the sleeves.

Suits narrowed the rib cage with jackets that curved out over the hips and had slashed-up sides like Chinese coolie coats.

The collection, besides making a woman want to turn back the clock, was paced with some daring George Sand costumes.

Pants for day and evening, which designers have been toying with for some time, got new support from de Barentzen. He made knee-length pink velveteen ones, startling with a matching top that was a tunic in front and a panel to the floor in back.

For cocktails, there was a provocative black crepe chemise, cut like a strapless apron, that stopped a little short of matching knee pants.

De Barentzen also showed a charcoal pants costume. It looked like a seven-eighths jacket, double - breasted and seamed with a low waist. But instead of a matching skirt, there were knee pants.

Barbecue-type fish dish washing saver

OTTAWA (CP)—Outdoor cooking of fish wrapped in aluminum foil is suggested by the fisheries department as a way of producing a tasty meal while avoiding the necessity of washing dishes.

The fish can be cooked in its own juices from the steam built up in the airtight container which also serves as a plate.

First, clean, scale and dress the fish, season it with salt and pepper, then wrap individual portions in heavy-duty aluminum foil or a double thickness of household aluminum foil folding the edges so they meet on three sides. Close the package with firm double folds.

Place the packages directly on hot coals, allowing five minutes cooking time for fillets and about 10 minutes for small whole fish or cuts about one inch thick. It isn't necessary to turn the packages.

When cooking time is up, open a test package. The fish is ready if the flesh flakes easily when tested with a fork and when the flesh down the backbone has lost its watery look and become opaque.

Cut a criss-cross at the top of each package and fold back the edges for serving.

Great screen lovers all dark-hair boys

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Blonde men, the record shows, have been notoriously sexless in movie history while blonde actresses—the Grables, Monroes and Novaks—long have been the screen's sex-pots.

Why this lack of screen sex appeal among blonde male stars?

One producer, who wants to remain nameless because he hates controversy, says that in his 35 years in Hollywood he can remember only one blonde star who excited women—both on and off screen. That was the late Leslie Howard.

Blondes and even freckle-faced redheads like Van Johnson can make the bobby-soxers sigh—but then who can't?

One moviemaker blames it all on the black and white camera.

LOOK WASHED OUT

"Blonde males, no matter how virile they are offscreen, are washed out in the black and white film. That's why we usually use a blonde to portray stupidity or crazed villainy. Had Richard Widmark been black-haired, I doubt if he ever would have got the chance to push that old lady in a wheelchair down a flight of stairs."

Some stars with light complexions have sex appeal—William Holden, Gary Cooper, Burt Lancaster, Kirk Douglas and the late James Dean—but none could be called true blondes.

Nelson Eddy, aided by romantic music, a rich baritone and Jeannette MacDonald, stirred some hearts in the 1930s.

But from Valentino on, the first-string screen lovers have been the dark-hair boys. Look at the list—Clark Gable, Gary Grant, Robert Taylor, Tyrone Power, Errol Flynn, Humphrey Bogart, John Garfield, Greg Peck, John Wayne, James Stewart, Marlon Brando, Canadian-born Glenn Ford, Rock Hudson and Tony Curtis.

And then there's Yul Brynner, who combs his hair with a towel. He has dark roots.
