Glamorous Christmas costumes unveiled before 150 fashion-conscious city women

The unveiling of glamorous clothes to be worn this Yuletide season was given a festive reception by some 150 fashion conscious women Wednesday night in the Annunciation auditorium when Mrs. Jean Stromdahl presented 30 outfits, ranging from basic dresses to late day cocktail and formal wear in a pre-Christmas fashion showing of women's apparel.

Eleven lovely models graced the footlights in a breathtaking array of garments, chosen with exacting care by show director Mrs. Stromdahl from Parkers Ladies Wear.

The successful function and coffee fare was sponsored by the Catholic Women's League, under the chairmanship of Mrs. William Bond.

The collection showed this season's softness, fluidity of line, achieved by blousing, draping and floating panels, all in exquisite fabrics of wools, pois de soie, chiffons and pure silks.

Daytime fashions were headlined by the trend of lighter weights evening fashions strongly reflected the mood of the 30s and appeared in opulent fabrics.

Skirts with the newest silhouettes in years showed pulled in hemlines, bubble shapes or widely flared.

And topping this picture of elegance was the ultimate in fashion coiffures, especially designed for each model by Modern Beauty Salon.

Framing the lovely contours of the models' faces were sweeping designs, beehives and curls delicating outlining the high styles.

Models appearing with grand savoir faire were Leona McChesney, Doris Sorenson, Lucille McRae, Jean Gordon, Emmy Gastaldini, Jenny Mulhern, Evelyn Carepnter, Leslie McLaren, Hilma Pylot, Nan Crawley and Evelyn Noble.

Dresses were displayed with the "bare back" look, deep V and plunging necklines, empire bodices, cummerbunds in many variations while several styles were especially designed to accent costumes with garlands of costume jewellery.

Luxury notes were added with the exclusive hats from Parkers showing this season's high-crowns and stove pipe models fashioned of velour, velvet and feathers.

The winter wool story was told in a winter white wool and mohair coat, brilliant English red basic dress, black stroller suit, enhanced by luxurious silver mink collar, Italian mult-colored wool outfits, jersey wool outfits, in willow green, African violet and emerald green boucle, the "little black" dress, topped by this season's favorite shag dress. The extra little topper, the Chanel jacket was also spotlighted.

Several ensembles were teamed with imitation Persian lamb jackets to lend after-five glamor to the basic dress with its 'dress it up or dress it down," characteristics.

It was noted that the softly textured wool garment is this year's favored fabric for its easy disciplined qualities.

In the show case of glamorous festive after-five garments were pure silks of multi-colors, pois de soie, Dior blue, lush red velvet, embroidered chiffon, combinations of black satin and Chantilly lace, shirred chiffon in contrasting shades of blue, black satin pois de soie, winter white French wool crepe trimmed with elegant white fox, brocades, Irish Capure lace trimmings and a show stopper of black velvet trimmed with radiant silver metallic threads and red embroidery to create a most dazzling effect.

Sheaths, pencil slim straps and skirts, flared peplums and floating panels fashioned these high-styled gowns while the collection showed two full length formal gowns designed with sweeping panelled backs and voluminous skirts of regal brocade.

A "Vision of Loveliness" was the "Good Night Ladies" number of aqua and mauve waltz length boudoir nightwear fashioned of crystal nylon and matching peignoirs.

Fashion show commentator was Mrs. George J. Brown.

A delightful show interlude was provided by the beautiful soprano voice of Joanne Clee who rendered "It's a Grand Night For Singing" and "If I Loved You." At the keyboard was Mrs. Denis Rowse.

Welcoming the guests was CWL president Mrs. G. P. Lyons.

The refreshment fare was convened by Mrs. Howard Roos.

Mrs. Lyons announced door prize ticket number was No. 13338.

Ticket holder may claim the prize by calling at Parkers Ladies Wear.
