DOWDY GARB IRKS NURSES

Dress Specialist Asked to Design Neater and More Attractive Uniforms

LONDON, May 25 (AP) —British nurses are up in arms. They want a new and smarter walking out uniform.

They are tired, they say, of looking dowdy and having the show always stolen by Red Cross nurses in their more attractive clothes.

The nurses' complaint was discussed at a recent Trades Union Congress meeting and the Tailors and Garment Workers have been asked to find a dress specialist who will design a new uniform.

What the nurses want, said a member of the Nurses Guild, is a uniform similar to that already being worn by nurses in Middlesex County Council hospitals—a close fitting tailored double-breasted white overall. Sisters in charge of wards in the Middlesex hospitals wear a short, smartly-cut blue shoulder cape over their white uniforms.

For outdoor wear the nurses consider a grey coat with red markings, worn by the Civil Nursing Reserve, is the smartest. A grey peaked cap is worn with these coats.

There is not a great deal of difference between the working uniform of the hospital nurse and the Red Cross nurse except for the big Red Cross which the latter wear on their white aprons. But besides the Red Cross there are a variety of different uniforms as the color of the stripes in the nurses overall dresses varies according to the hospital they are attached to. In some hospitals they wear caps while in others they wear the veil headdress.

Some of the bigger hospitals provide their nurses with their own style of outdoor uniform such as a small poke bonnet and cape, but the state registered nurses are given only a plain navy blue serge coat and cap and are the "Cinderellas."

Besides a neater, smarter uniform the nurses hope to obtain a standardization of uniform so there won't be varying styles and so the public will be able to distinguish between those who have worked for years to qualify and those who are only part-time nurses.

THESE ARE THE DISPLACED PERSONS OF EUROPE — A WAR TRAGEDY

The map shows the unprecedented migration of civilians growing out of the war. Now with the war's end, these civilians are counting the days until they can return to their homeland. It is the task of the United Nations and Rehabilitation Administration to feed, clothe, and transport them.
