GIRL STANDS EGGS ON END

TRAIL (CP)—Miss Belinda Mammone proved here that she could stand an egg on end without breaking the shell—a trick that Christopher Columbus failed to do.

Perhaps Trail chickens lay queer-shaped eggs. At any rate it can be done and not with just one egg but with six—and all at the same time.

Belinda, only 15, announced her achievement to a Trail Times reporter and was invited to the newspaper office to demonstrate. She selected one from half-a-dozen eggs and skilfully, after considerable time, balanced it on the broad end.

"There," she said triumphantly. "And what more, I had six of them standing on end at home this morning."

CADI SEEKS HOME

PIETERMARITZBURG, South Africa (CP)—A magistrate recently adjourned his court when a constable whispered that there was a house to let in this Natal city. He returned an hour later without success, the house having been let just five minutes before he arrived.

GARDEN NOTEBOOK

Post-war trends in garden design give evidence of following the same direction as house architecture, away from the traditional toward the functional. Instead of planting to create landscape pictures of traditional styles, we will arrange our gardens to serve definite purposes first, and develop picturesque qualities which will not interfere with these functions.

Just what are the functions of a small home garden? Most general agreement is likely to be that it serve as an outdoor home, where we can enjoy fresh air and sunshine and such recreational activities as may appeal to us. This is not new; since World War I the idea of the garden as an "outdoor living room" has spread. But here, as in house architecture, tradition has given way slowly; there has been a conflict between the desire for a useful garden and one that will look like others, especially those we remember. So a large proportion of all small home grounds planted 20 years or more ago are now so overgrown with trees and shrubs—planted for traditional reasons—that sunshine is excluded from both house and grounds, and flowers—perhaps even grass—cannot be well grown because of too much shade.

While all this shade was developing, sunshine was rising so rapidly in our esteem that we are sometimes accused of being sun worshippers. But there are sound scientific reasons for valuing sunshine, which has been proved to be a vital necessity for human well being. For once, fashion, art and science are working to the same purpose, to increase the amount of sunshine and sunny environment available to us. Millions are migrating to those sections of the country which enjoy the most sunshine. In less favored places we must design our clothing, houses, gardens and decorations to make the most of all the sunshine we possess.

Garden design is following this trend. Post-war gardens will not be without shade, for nothing can be pleasanter than the shade of a tree to one who has been exposed to the warm rays of the summer sun; but they will confine shade to definitely planned areas, where one may rest and view a garden drenched in sunshine.

Such gardens can develop a variety of floral beauty which is impossible in overplanted grounds, where the roots of trees and shrubs fill the soil and their leaves shut out the sunshine over the entire area.

In sunny garden areas many activities can be enjoyed, but none is likely to be more popular and rewarding than gardening itself, the growing of fine plants, either for food or flowers, which millions have learned to enjoy during the years of war gardening.

BAND BUYS INSTRUMENTS

GREENVILLE — The importance which residents of this village place on music as a cultural element was indicated at the annual meeting of the Greenville Concert Band recently by Secretary H. H. McKay, who announced that the band had paid for its instruments.

Involved in this statement was a background of seven years of music and work. In 1940 the band received delivery of 43 instruments to replace ancient pieces and make it the best-equipped band in the north. Those instruments cost $8,786.

In announcing that this obligation had been paid in full, Mr. McKay also told the meeting that the band plans to purchase 20 more new instruments in order to maintain its high standard.

Background of the Greenville Concert Band was recalled by Leonard Douglas, who was elected president. Established in 1881, the band made its first public appearance only a few days after its first practice. It played the doxology at a church meeting. Since that time, succeeding generations have become accomplished players. The band has filled many engagements at Prince Rupert.

The following officers were elected:

Honorary President—William J. Stephens.

President—Leonard Douglas.

Executive—Peter Calder, Herbert Robinson, Johnson Russ, Charles Leeson, Samuel Grey, Ben Alexander.

Bandmaster—Fred McKay.

Assistant Bandmasters — Simon McKay, George Martin, Simon Calder.

Assistant Manager — Albert Moore.

Practice Committee — James Angus, Alfred Robinson, Louis McKay, Jeffrey Martin, Abraham Davis, Percy Azak.

Music and Property Keepers—Chris Calder, Horace Angus, Peter McKay, William McKay.

THREW RINGS IN FIRE

WEYBURN, Sask. (CP) — One young housewife of this prairie town is thinking seriously of never removing her rings again. Taking them off to do some washing, she held the rings in her left hand when she went to throw some paper into the stove. The rings instead of the paper went into the fire.
