BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Mr. Abel is at his worst when playing with Mr. Champion. To avoid the great man's criticism, he tries too hard.

For some unaccountable reason Mr. New, who is much better on the sidelines than at the table, chose to open the jack of hearts.

Mr. Abel looked at the card suspiciously. It might be from a holding of doubleton queen-jack, but it was unlikely that Mr. New would be that tricky. He would be more likely to lead the queen from that holding.

Mr. Abel finally decided that the lead was a singleton or from a doubleton J 7 or J 4. If a singleton was the right guess, then Mrs. Keen had the queen twice-guarded and a finesse of then ten on the second round of trumps would be necessary to avoid a trump loser.

Mr. Abel

Mr. Abel confined his thinking to this one problem and forgot to plan the hand as a whole. He won the first trick in dummy with the king of hearts, returned a small heart and finessed the ten. Mr. New won with the queen and returned a club.

There was no way to avoid the risk of the club finesse and when that lost the hand was down one.

Mr. Abel had a one-track mind on this deal. If he hadn't been so anxious to keep his partner's good will, he might have figured out that it made little difference whether Mrs. Keen had the queen of trumps or not. If he had laid down the ace and king of hearts at the start, the problem would have solved itself.

But suppose Mrs. Keen had started with three hearts to the queen. The contract was still makeable on the following play. Cash the ace and king of diamonds, go to dummy with the king of spades and ruff dummy's last diamond. Then lead spades until Mrs. Keen ruffs.

She would have to return a club into dummy's ace-queen—or a diamond, which could be ruffed in dummy while the losing club goes off from the closed hand.

If Mrs. Keen refuses to ruff any of the spade leads, discard the five of clubs from dummy on the fourth round, then lead a trump. Mrs. Keen would be in with the queen of trumps and again any return she chose would give declarer his 12th trick.
