Laurier Advocates a Canadian Navy

Monk and Col. Hughes, to the Nationalists and to the Imperialists, and urge them earnestly, patriotically, to try to come together and evolve a worthy policy, worthy of Canada, and worthy of a daughter of the motherland?

By Nationalists I have been told I was a traitor to my race," continued Sir Wilfrid; "by Imperialists I have been told I was a separatist. Let us as Liberals be above all such appeals to passion and prejudice. Let no Liberal take advantage of the existing situation to excite passions or prejudices. We wait for the policy of the government, and will judge it on its merits—on its merits, I repeat. We will support it if it is right, and oppose it if it is wrong, but the judgment shall be given upon merit, and not upon passion or prejudice.

A Thoroughly Canadian Navy.

"In the meantime—and while we continue to wait, and wait, and wait—(laughter)—we stand where we have stood right along. Our policy is a Canadian navy, built in Canada, manned in Canada, under the control of the Canadian Parliament and the Canadian people, and ready if Britain should ever be in danger—I will not say that—if Britain should ever be on trial—to do its part, a worthy part, as a loyal daughter of the old motherland." (Prolonged applause.)

What of the Past Year?

The Liberal leader dealt briefly with the position of the Borden government. "When the people spoke at the polls last September," he observed, "we obeyed that mandate with all possible promptitude. We placed no obstacles in the way of our successors. We remained in office not an hour longer than was necessary in order that they might have opportunity to carry out the policies they had been proclaiming. Now, what have the government been doing during the twelve months they have been in office?"

"Nothing," "talking," "discharging workmen on the canal," were the answers volunteered by the audience.

"Well," responded Sir Wilfrid with a smile, "so far as constructive work is concerned, what they have done would sit lightly on the wings of a sparrow and not impede its progress."

"They have done nothing but talk," shouted the audience.

Two Demons Rule the Roost.

"One could hardly say that they have been inactive," again smiled the chief. "They have been active wrangling among themselves. They have assembled day by day at the cabinet council board, but have not yet been able to announce that it has been possible for them to come together on a permanent naval policy. The trouble has been that seated with the demon Nationalism is the demon Jingoism, and the two demons have been ruling the roost. They have prevented the government coming together in practical action. Oh, my friends, they sowed the wind and they are reaping the whirlwind. They cannot reconcile the conflicting passions they have aroused. We must continue to wait for a permanent policy."

A boy named Ryan, fell into the Liffey at City Quay, Dublin, Sunday, and was in imminent danger when Anthony Murphy jumped in to his assistance, holding him up until both were rescued by means of a life boat. James Baird, aged 47, a shipwright in the employ of Messrs. Workman, Clark & Co., Ltd., met with a fatal accident at Belfast yard. While at work on a vessel he fell from the hurricane deck, breaking his neck.
