
"GHOST HUNTERS"—A half-hour television story of the maritime operational role of the RCAF—will be shown for the first time on the CBC English network on September 26 at 9 p.m. (EDT). The film illustrates an RCAF "Argus" crew detecting a submarine lurking in mid-Atlantic. The crew then carries out a dramatic game of cat and mouse until the "enemy" is finally destroyed.

Blonde British star hopes Dad will take up career in province

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Usually when film stars talk about world problems, they speak more from emotion than knowledge. The exception is Dana Wynter, who knows the turmoil of today's Africa from having lived there.

The actress with the cameo-like beauty was born in London and went to Southern Rhodesia at 17. Her father, Dr. Peter Wynter, took an assignment as a surgeon there, and Dana, then Dagmar, studies medicine at Rhodes University in South Africa for two years before returning to England to turn to an acting career.

Her father remained in Rhodesia but is now en route to Hollywood to visit his daughter and her new son. Dana is married to lawyer Greg Bautzer.

"I hope to persuade my father to take a new assignment, perhaps in British Columbia," she said. "I don't think Africa is a good place for Europeans any longer. After the Africans proved in the Congo that they could put the colonists on the run, could make them flee in helicopters and airplanes, I think they will continue to drive them out."

EXPECTS MORE TROUBLE

"I'm afraid there is going to be more and more trouble there. And the answers to the problems cannot come from the outside. They have to be found in Africa itself. Only those who live there understand what it is all about."

Dana is anxious to do a film about Africa today, and said that Leslie Stevens is writing one for her at 20th Century-Fox. She played in "Something of Value," which she felt made a good start at treating African problems, although it made some errors.

Dana is getting back in action after a year's absence from the stages; her last was "Sink the Bismark." Her studio has two other projects besides the African one, and she has two properties for her own company, including "The Seventh Veil." She plans to do it as a TV special or a movie.

AMBITIOUS

HILLEROED, Denmark (Reuters)—A Danish musician Friday admitted in court he ran a marriage bureau which offered the same pretty girl as a prospective wife to 1,081 men.

Stripper made census-taker

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — The Brazilian census bureau asked for a truce Friday in its losing battle with a fiery nudist queen who won't let census-takers onto her island nudist colony unless they strip.

Backed up by 14 growling police dogs trained to attack people in clothes, she held off a boatload of census men Thursday when they tried to land on her private "island in the sun" in Rio Bay.

"If you want to count us, take off your clothes," she shouted.

Now a census official has appealed to Senorita Luz del Fuego (translation: Fireball) through the newspapers to accept a new solution:

The census bureau will appoint Fireball, who is a stripper in clothed society, the official census taker on her island with full pay, if she will dress up and report to census officers of her members.

HER LAST VOYAGE

SOUTHAMPTON, England (AP) The Union-Castle Line's 20,000-ton Winchester Castle ended her 30-year career as a passenger vessel when she docked Friday from South Africa. The liner has been sold to Japanese interests for scrap.

Winner runs out of luck

BERKLEY, Calif. (AP) — Frank Zeigler, like others the world over, dreamed of winning the Irish Sweepstakes.

On June 1, a horse named St. Paddy won $140,000 for Zeigler, a 63-year-old janitor at the Oakland Tribune.

He was overwhelmed—and a little wary.

So Zeigler went to Superior Court and told the judge that he had been a drinker for many years, had little education and was frankly afraid he'd be an easy mark for sharpies with designs on his bonanza.

The court appointed Crocker-Anglo National Bank as guardian of Zeigler's sweepstakes winnings, to dole it out to him in small amounts, as he requested.

But acquaintances in Oakland's skid road, aware of Zeigler's winnings, often would talk him into buying rounds of drinks. Always, he joined in the toasts to St. Paddy.

September 9, little more than three months after he won his $140,000, Zeigler was found on an Oakland sidewalk unconscious, his skull fractured.

Zeigler developed bronchial pneumonia and died Thursday night.

The $40,000 left after taxes goes to three of Zeigler's nieces, his only known survivors.

Zeigler's lawyer, T. Roy Hoover, said Friday he thought the elderly janitor was murdered—for $15.

"His skull was crushed in several places," Hoover said, "and the $15 he had on him at the time was missing."

And here and there along skid road, a man would ask:

"Where's old Frank? The guy with the luck of the Irish."

CANADIAN SENTENCED — Elizabeth Spedding, 45-year-old Canadian, is in the New York House of Correction pending an appeal against a two-year sentence on a charge of trafficking internationally in call girls. Miss Spedding, a tall blonde native of Saskatchewan, was arrested May 17 by FBI who said she used the title "countess" to lend class to a $100,000 a year racket. She was fined $5,000 and ordered to leave the country.

Drama critic "grilled" by U.S. security men

NEW YORK (AP)—Kenneth Tynan, a British drama critic who signed a newspaper advertisement last spring expressing sympathy for Fidel Castro's Cuban regime, said Friday he was questioned by the United States Senate internal security subcommittee about the ad.

Tynan, 33, who came to the United States about two years ago as guest drama critic for the New Yorker magazine, describes his experiences in the October issue of Harper's magazine.

"Governmental grilling of foreign newspaper men is not a practice that one instinctively associates with the workings of Western democracy," he writes.

In Washington, committee counsel Jules Sourwine said a number of foreign journalists of various nationalities had been questioned over the last few years.

Tynan described the questions on Cuba as follows:

"Had I received money for signing the ad? No. Was it paid for by Cuban gold? No. Was I aware that President Eisenhower had made a speech in which he stated that the Castro regime was a menace to the stability of the Western Hemisphere? No, I was not. And did I think myself justified in holding opinions that openly defied those of the president of the United States?

"I brooded over this for a long, incredulous moment, and then replied that I was English, and that I had been forming opinions all my life without worrying for a second whether or not they coincided with those of the president of the United States."

Tynan said he answered all the committee's questions as well as he could, but had this to say at the tend of the interview:

"I am a visitor to the United States, not an immigrant nor a resident alien; nor have I done anything during my stay to belie the statement I made when my visa was first granted—namely, that I am not and never have been a member of the Communist party or of any affiliated organization. . . ."

ALGIERS (Reuters)—A total of 699 Algerian insurgents have been killed and 746 captured in Operation Cicada launched by the French Army in Algeria two months ago, French miltary authorities announced Friday.

Sitting hints cause storm

LONDON (AP)—A British government department this week got around to replacing 1,068 old-fashioned office chairs, some of them dating back to the reign of Queen Victoria.

In issuing the new chairs an official also issued sitting instructions to the girls who use them:

Never cross your legs and keep both feet together on the floor.

Never rest your elbows on the table before you.

"We've never heard of such piffling stupidity," snapped one of the girls.

"Gross impertinence," said an official of the union.

"What difference does it make if you cross your legs?" asked another girl. "I will sit as I please."
