BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

It is no coincidence that stories about players who "know every card after four tricks have been played" are told by non-bridge players. The more you know about the game, the more you realize that no such monster mentality exists.

In actual play it is not necessary to be able to place every card. Usually, determining the location of one key card will suffice. And there are way to develop such information.

Mr. Dale could not place every card in today's deal, but he was able to place one card with reasonable assurance. And that was enough to enable him to find the killing defense.

Mrs. Keen led the four of spades and the five went on from dummy. Mr. Dale played the nine and Mr. Abel false-carded with the ace.

Mr. Abel

Using the rule of eleven, Mr. Dale subtracted the number of the card led from eleven. Four from 11 is seven. He knew there were seven spades higher than the four, outside of his partner's hand. He had one higher, dummy had three and, therefore, Mr. Abel had three.

Now, if there was any future in the spade suit for the defenders, Mrs. Keen would have to have led from the king. Assuming that she had that card, what were Mr. Abel's spades? If he had started with A J 6 or A 10 6, he would have won the first trick with the jack or ten. So apparently he did not have either of those cards. Could he have had A 7 6? No, because then Mrs. Keen would have held K J 10 4 and would have led the jack.

On this reasoning Mr. Dale placed the king of spades in the closed hand and forgot about the spade suit.

At trick two Mr. Abel finessed the queen of diamonds. Mr. Dale won and led the trey of hearts. Mr. Abel let the queen hold on his left. Back came the six of hearts and here Mr. Dale ducked, letting dummy's jack win.

The club finesse was now the only play for nine tricks and when that lost, another heart led by Mrs. Keen enabled Mr. Dale to cash two tricks in that suit to beat the hand.

Note that a spade return by Mr. Dale at trick three would have given Mr. Abel time to set up both his diamonds and clubs and rack up an easy game.

South dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
