"Naughty Nineties" Pin-up Girl Dies

CHIDDINGFOLD, Surrey, England (Reuters) — Gertie Millar, 73 pin-up girl of the naughty nineties, who jumped from the bright lights of London's theatre world to the pages of Debrett's Peerage, died at her home here recently.

In private life the twice-married Miss Millar was Gertrude, Countess of Dudley. The Earl of Dudley died in 1932, leaving her a fortune of £400,000. Her first husband, Lionel Monckton, music critic and composer, died in 1924.

Her life read like a story-book romance. Born in 1879, the daughter of a mill worker, she first appeared on the stage at the age of 13. Within two years she was at the Gaiety Theatre in London, one of the most famous music halls of all time.

She rose to stardom almost overnight, appearing in shows on both sides of the Atlantic and breaking the hearts of the free-spending romeos of the early 1900's.

During her first marriage, a love-sick German Baron committed suicide in the drawing room of her London home.

After appearing in such shows as "The Orchid," The Spring Chicken," and "The New Aladdin," she travelled to New York in 1908 to star in "The Girls of Gottenburg."

She left the stage in 1918, after marrying Monckton, who wrote most of her songs.

In recent years she lived quietly in this Surrey village, making infrequent trips to London to see the new shows.

CONSOLATION, THE FLYING ARROW

Man's life, may be likened to an arrow's flight,
Out of darkness into light;
And out of light into darkness again,
Perhaps to pleasure, perhaps to pain.
There must be something above or below,
Somewhere unseen a mighty bow
That makes the arrows fly, and fly,
One who knows why we live and die.

But how fleet is the glance of the mind,
Compared with the speed of its flight;
The lightning itself lags behind,
Even the swift winged arrows of light.
When I think of my own native land,
In a moment I seem to be there;
But, alas! recollections at hand
Soon hurries me back to my lair.

But the sea-fowl has gone to her nest,
Thus—the mind is quite cleared of despair;
For the ego has reached its attempted crest,
So I proceed with my cabin repair.
There is consolation in every place,
If there is mercy-encouraging thought;
Gives even sin, and affliction a grace,
And reconciles the wandering soul to its lot.

PORCH AND WINDOW BOXES BECOMING TO NEW HOME

For many city dwellers a window box offers their only opportunity for gadening. It can give much pleasure to the owner, and add an attractive decoration to the house. To get the greatest pleasure out of it plant it yourself, and take care of the plants.

You can even make the box, if you know how to saw and drive nails. Use 1-inch boards of cedar or white pine, and paint the box to harmonize with the house trim. A box should be at least 8 inches deep, 10 inches wide, and long enough to fit the window.

Outdoor boxes should have drainage, so that excess water from rains can escape. Never buy a self-watering box for outdoors, for every rain would flood the plants and eventually kill them. The plants to use depend on the amount of sunshine they receive.

On the south side of a house, with sunshine unimpeded by trees or buildings, the balcony petunias will thrive. These develop long stems which trail from the box, bearing flowers of white, blue, red, pink and crimson. The balcony petunias were bred in Europe for window-box use, and are among the finest of all petunias.

Trailing lobelias have the same habit of growth, with small flowers of sapphire blue. Nasturtium Golden Gleam is an excellent window-box plant, and there are red, pink and organe nasturtiums which have a vine-like habit. Dwarf zinnias, marigolds, phlox, and the lovely Heavenly Blue morning glory can be grown. Petunias and lobelia should be purchased as plants at this season, but the others can be grown from seed.

For boxes on the east and west sides of the house, enjoying a few hours of sun, impatiens, clarkia, begonias, fuschia, lantana, pansies, dwarf celosia, and torenia will do. Geraniums will bloom well with as much as six hours sun a day. For vines, use vinca, and the various ivies.

Boxes on the north side of the house should be filled with foliage plants. Fancy leaved caladiums are excellent for the purpose. These grow from a huge bulb which can be saved from year to year. Their elephant's ear leaves are attractively colored. Ferns, coleus, sedum spctabile, and dwarf evergreens are other possibilities.

Because of the small quantity of soil which a window box holds, it should be the best obtainable and well enriched. Florists' potting soil or its equivalent should be used, and with it a complete plant food should be mixed at the rate of one heaping teaspoonful for each gallon of soil. A similar quantity should be added every month during the growing season.

A window box should be examined daily and watered whenever it is dry. If drainage is good there is small danger of overwatering. Faded flowers should be cut off regularly to encourage new growth, and stems cut back for the same purpose. If insects attack the plants they can usually be controlled by dusting with rotenone.

Man Released
from laxative habit
"I suffered from constipation for years until I started to eat ALL-BRAN regularly," confesses Orillia, Ontario, man. "I have since stopped taking laxative drugs—feel like my old self again, thanks to ALL-BRAN!" This crisp, toasty cereal has helped thousands regain youthful regularity. If you can't keep regular because of lack of diet-bulk, try Kellogg's ALL-BRAN and see if it doesn't help you, too. It's the only type ready-to-eat cereal that supplies all the bulk you may need. ALL-BRAN is not habit-forming . . . it's high in cereal protein and iron. Eat ½ cupful daily; drink plenty of liquids. Kellogg's is so sure you'll like ALL-BRAN, if you're not completely satisfied after 10 days, send empty box to Kellogg's, London, Ont. Get DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK!
