HUDSON STRAIT BETTER ROUTE

FOR SHIPPING THAN ST. LAWRENCE DECLARES CAPT. BARTLETT, FAMOUS ARCTIC EXPLORER

FINE HARBORS

Will Provide Route for Both Canadian and American Grain is Ambitious Prediction

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Hudson Bay harbors are the finest in the world, and Hudson Straits is fraught with far less danger to navigation than the St. Lawrence river from Montreal to the sea, said Capt. Bartlett, famous Arctic explorer, in an interview with a newspaper correspondent here.

Captain Bartlett, who was a member of Peary's North Pole expedition, envisages a time when the grain not only of Canada's prairie provinces, but that of the northwestern United States, will go to European countries by the northern outlet, with a great assembly point in Saskatchewan or Manitoba, probably at Saskatoon or The Pas.

SAFE BODY OF WATER

"For four or five months of the year Hudson Straits is the safest body of water to navigate in the world," he declared. "There is almost perpetual daylight. There are no fogs such as we encounter in the St. Lawrence. Why does not Canada wake up and finish the Hudson Bay route and provide an outlet for products that will save Canadian producers millions in rail and handling tolls? I am told it is because of political opposition in industrial Ontario and Quebec. I don't know any real seaman who would not be glad to sail Hudson Straits."

Captain Bartlett told the Free Press of a plan, hitherto unannounced, for a dirigible service vit the "Top of the World," linking European, Canadian and American cities with the Orient, with ships flying over the Arctic wastes.

LANDING FIELDS

With this purpose in mind, he is preparing to make two Arctic surveys by air and land. In this he expects to receive aid from the United States or Canadian Governments. Selection of suitable landing fields, one or more of which would be in Western Canada, possibly at Winnipeg or Regina, would be an important part of such plan.

With such an arrangement in the Arctic, and an agreement between Britain and the United States, whereby the British navy would police the Atlantic and the American fleet the Pacific, English-speaking races need never fear Oriental world domination, he said. Captain Bartlett is a survivor of the days of wooden ships and "iron men." He is a Newfoundlander by birth, descended from a long line of navigators and seal hunters. He was captain of the ill-fated Karluk, lost on a Canadian Polar exploration trip some years ago.

The crushing of the Karluk in the ice, and Bartlett's leadership in guiding the crew to safety in a long trek to settlements on the Behring Straits, are written i nthe pages of Canadian history.

BLIND MAN ASKS FOR DEATH AND GETS IT

CHEROKEE, Okla., Jan. 18.—Preferring death to spending his remaining days in blindness and behind prison bars, C. E. Marble, 69, has won a plea that he be sent to the electric chair for murder.

The aged man shot and killed Gilbert Hutchinson, 14, and wounded the boy's brother and father. They had teased him, he said.

Brought into court recently, Marble entered a plea of guilty.

"But two sentences are possible—life sentence or death," District Judge Charles Swindal, advised him.

Marble rose slowly and said: "A month ago I lost the sight of one eye. The other is affected and I will soon be totally blind. To be blind and in prison at the same time would be unbearable. I prefer to be sentenced to the chair."

When alienists found Marble was normal the death sentence was pronounced.

"Thank you, judge," the aged man said.

Had Salt Rheum All Over Her Hands

Mrs. Herbert J. Mason, Grand Falls, N.B., writes:—"I had salt rheum all over my hands and especially between my fingers. It got so bad it was impossible for me to put them in water or do my housework. After trying many medicines and salves, that did me no good, I heard of being so wonderful, and after taking three bottles I am entirely relieved of my trouble. I am sure I can't recommend B.B.B. too highly to those who have salt rheum like I had."
