THISTLE TEAM IS WELCOMED

EXECUTIVE OF REGIMENT EXPRESS PLEASURE AT MOST RECENT ADDITION TO SOCCER

The executive of the Regiment football team met last evening at the Armoury, J. S. Wilson presiding. Other members present were C. J. Norrington, sec.-treas., C. Youngman, F. Hardy, F. Hunter.

C. J. Norrington and F. Hardy were appointed delegates to the annual meeting of the Football Association. Satisfaction was expressed at the formation of the Thistle football team as it was felt that a three-team league was necessary that football might be kept alive and interesting.

Delegates were instructed to support the formation of an Intermediate Football League if at all feasible, so that the players who graduate from the Junior Football League might get the experience necessary before they reach the age and weight necessary for senior football.

Around The World With Sport Fans

(By The Tramp)

Alf Harding, who is to box Jimmy McDonald next week, is from Bristol, England, the place that has turned out a number of first class boxers. Since that he has made his home at Calgary and Vancouver. It is announced by the management that the boys' band will be in attendance at the event.

The attempt of the eastern sportsmen to horn in on the lacrosse olympic team failed as it deserved to fail. New Westminster, the home of lacrosse in the west, is entitled to all the glory it can get from the visit this year to Amsterdam.

John Risko, the heavyweight who recently punched Jack Sharkey out of the famous "elimination tournament," was billed to address a rather tony club in Cleveland the other day. Blushing, perspiring and goose-pimpled, the big boxer got up, gulped, and said: "I—I'm glad—I'm glad I'm up here with all the gentlemen. I ain't much on speakin'. Sorry. But I can rassle anybody in the house—or fight."

Comment on the game played several weeks ago between England and Scotland is veryinteresting. Here is what the Observer says of it:

As the score suggests, there was no common ground of comparison between the elevens of Scotland and England at the Wembley Stadium yesterday. The Scots were such masters of their craft that the Saxons appeared as if they were as helpless as small boys chasing a butterfly. It may be that there was a contest in the first half. Possibly the two goals by which Scotland led at the interval exaggerated their superiority, but fortified with such an advantage the Scots proceeded to play a winning game with such self-possession, such combination and such ease that the Englishmen were almost lookers-on.

The Scots did just as they liked with the ball, every member of their team showing that command of the sliddery thing for which they are justly famous. It is difficult to recall a match in which England have been so completely subdued. One will say that the English back play was punctured with blunders, that Jones of Blackburn Rovers had no idea of checkmating Jackson of Huddersfield, the Scottish outside right, that the half backs of the home land were ordinary toilers and defenders, seldom prompting attacks, and that there was but one forward in the English vanguard. So it appeared, but the root of the matter is that, take the match as a whole, the English eleven were outclassed by the entire team work of the Scots.

Once were counted fifteen consecutive passes from Scot to Scot, without an opponent ever getting a chance of playing the ball. That was perfect manoeuvre, and the spectators simply chortled to see such things. This united action and the intelligent and superb raiding of Jackson and Alan Morton were beyond any conception of the game that the Englishmen showed. Looking at this exhibition, it is not astonishing that England has not won a match and not saved a point during this season.

SPORT CHAT

Battling Dido Gurvich seems to be doing better on his training campaign in the south than even some of his warmest local supporters could have expected. With one decision and one knockout (of Johnny Marks on Thursday night in Vancouver) added to his record during the brief two weeks or so he has been south, the local boy would seem to be making good. He was fortunate in getting on a Vic Foley preliminary card for his first engagement in the south. This caused considerable attention evidently for Dido just this week figured on an Elks' Lodge card. Tomorrow night he journeys to Britannia Beach to engage in a boxing show there. He should be rapidly gaining the experience which he needs in his business. Local fans are interested and gratified in his showing. Possibly, he may be able to retrieve lost fortune when he returns home.

Unwise publicity served to make the Montreal Maroons unpopular in the National Hockey League during the past season. In nearly every city they visited they were "greeted" with exaggerated newspaper accounts telling about this crashing, bruising, rough-house team. Maroons undoubtedly were a heavy-hitting aggregation, but no more so than were the New York Rangers or the Boston Bruins, who in one game at Madison Square Garden engaged in the fiercest and most relentless body-checking sixty-minute duel ever seen in the professional league. Maroons deserve credit, not censure. They asked no quarter, and they gave none, and they came as close as runners-up can possibly come to winning the championship. Only in accurate shooting cost them the final game.
