Blackwood on BRIDGE

If Mr. Dale had opened a minimum no trump and had held only mediocre heart support, he would simply have rebid three no trump over his partner's three-heart bid. But with very good heart support and a shaky holding for no-trump play, he decided a final contract in hearts would be his best bet.

His four-diamond bid was a two-for-one call, showing full support for hearts, plus the ace of diamonds. This is the Blackwood method of rebidding after partner's jump takeout of your opening bid of one no trump. Anything but a rebid of three no trump inferentially shows that you have the cards to raise partner's bid to four. However, you may as well show a key card on the way up.

Mr. Abel

Mr. Abel's five-club call was a cue - bid showing the ace of clubs. When he heard Mr. Dale say five diamonds, showing the king of that suit, he tried for the slam.

The play might be called the case of the premature discard. The jack of spades was led, covered with the queen and won by the ace. A spade was returned and Mr. Abel was faced with the problem of what to discard from his hand — a low diamond or the 10 of clubs.

He reasoned that if the queen of diamonds were held doubleton by either opponent then he would have no losers in that suit and the right discard at trick two would be the 10 of clubs.

But if the queen of diamonds were amply guarded, then apparently the only chance was the diamonds were divided 3-3. In that case the best discard at trick two was a diamond.

After pulling trumps, the ace and king of diamonds could be cashed and a third diamond ruffed in the closed hand setting up dummy's fourth card in the suit for a club discard.

Mr. Abel guessed wrong, discarding a diamond and eventually had to lose a club trick for down one.

There was no good reason to make the decision at trick two. He could have given himself both chances. The best play was to ruff the spade return, then cash the ace of trumps and dummy's two high diamonds. The drop of the queen would end the problem.

If the queen failed to drop, there would still be the chance of finding the diamonds divided 3-3. This would be the spot to cash dumy's king of spades and discard the last diamond from the closed hand. A third diamond could then be ruffed in the hope of setting up dummy's fourth diamond for the club discard.
