BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Often you hear a player say he never holds good cards and has to sit and watch his luckier opponents make game after game

This sad story may be true. On the other hand, it may be that the player should take a long, searching look at his defensive game. Is his defence stodgy and unimaginative? In following suit and in leading does he always follow the safe, bookish course? If so, he is probably missing chances to defeat at least some of those "ice-cold" games his opponents are reaching.

Mr. Dale

The winning player is the one who can shake himself out of the doldrums of conservatism and who has the courage and the vision to make unusual defensive plays designed to throw declarer off the track.

Some such plays involve the danger of losing one or more tricks you could have won. Others, like Mr. Dale's play in today's hand, involve practically no danger at all.

Dummy's ace won the opening heart lead and Mr. Muzzy decided to try to set the spade suit. He planned to lead to his ace, then back toward the queen, hoping Mr. Dale had the king. With the favorable distribution of the suit, this would normally have netted a total of four spade winners.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	All Pass

Opening lead: Seven of hearts.

But Mr. Dale's mind was working fast. He realized that he was going to get exactly one spade trick no matter how he played. So, with nothing to lose, he promptly played the king under the ace.

Mr. Muzzy frowned over this development. It seemed clear to him now that Mr. Masters had started with J 10 9 8 5 in spades so that it was hopeless to set the suit.

Deciding to look elsewhere for his nine tricks, he led a club and finessed dummy's jack. Mr. Masters won with the queen and returned his last heart. Mr. Muzzy ducked but Mr. Dale overtook with the jack and led another heart to drive out the king.

After this ,Mr. Muzzy had no chance for his contract. He was plenty mad when he found out about Mr Dales' spade holding.

"Imagine that," he complained, "pulling the king of spades by mistake and having it turn out to be a good play."

Mr. Dale smiled innocently. "One of the luckiest 'mistakes' I ever made," he admitted.
