Fitness Expert Says Clumsiness Like Stuttering

VANCOUVER (CP) — Present-day physical education standards make for "physical illiteracy," Dr. Doris Plewes told the Commonwealth Conference on Physical Education here Tuesday night.

Dr. Plewes, assistant director of national physical fitness at Ottawa, compared physical literacy with the academic variety.

"More attention should be devoted to basic physical powers," she said. Clumsy children are treated with contempt or neglected. "Clumsiness is a kind of muscle-stuttering, commonly found in varying degrees of intensity." If a youngster stutters, something is done for him. "If he's clumsy, he receives contempt."
