BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

The trouble with Mr. Muzzy's game or, to be exact, one of the troubles with his game—is that he consistently fails to recognize exceptions to general rules.

There was nothing wrong with his bidding in today's hand. When his partner opened the auction with a diamond, he properly bid two no trump. This was an acceptable call in that his hand contained the equivalent of an opening bid in high cards, a balanced distribution, something in every suit, and even a couple of ten spots for good measure. As he had not previously passed, this bid was forcing the game. His play of the hand, however, fell far below par. The contract was an absolute lay down against any defense and yet he muffed it by overlooking the key play at trick two.

Mr. Muzzy

How would you handle it?

The opening lead of the seven of clubs was won on the board with the lone ace. There was only one correct play at this point. Mr. Muzzy led the king of diamonds from the board. That wasn't it.

Mr. Meek won the trick with the ace and returned a club. Mr. Muzzy finessed the jack, lost to the queen, then won the club return with the king. After running four diamonds he realized that he had only eight winners in sight.

To get his ninth trick he took the spade finesses, whereupon Mr. Dale took the king of spades and laid down two good clubs to break the contract.

"Everything was wrong on the hand," Mr. Muzzy wailed.

Actually the only thing wrong was the play. As it says in the textbooks, it is usually best to go after your longest suit first at a no trump contract.

But that is only a generality. There is nothing wrong with using the little grey cells occasionally, just to make sure that the rule applies to the situation at hand. In this case, there was extreme danger in getting a club lead prematurely from Mr. Meek's side of the table. There was no danger at all in another club lead from Mr. Dale.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	All Pass

Opening lead: Seven of clubs.

Therefore, at trick two the smart play is to lead dummy's queen of spades and finesse it. If it wins, you have your two spade ticks that need for the contract. If it loses, you can handle any return and you will have time to set up the diamonds while you still control the club situation.

Sixteen dead in crossing smash-up

LAMONT, Alta. (CP) — Sixteen high school students were killed and 25 persons injured early Tuesday when a fast-moving Canadian National Railways freight train knifed through a school bus at a level-crossing near here.

The rear of the bus was reported to have been sheared off and carried about 100 feet. The remainder hurtled down the track spilling victims along the snow-covered right-of-way.

Medical supplies and doctors were dispatched from Edmonton.
