BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

When Mrs. Keen responded with one no trump to her partner's opening one spade bid, she was describing a hand within the following limits:

She had from six to 10 high card points.

She did not have a suit and a hand good enough to go to the two level.

She did not have as many as four spades.

If she had as many as three spades, either her hand was in the lower range of a no trump response or she had no distributional values, or both.

Mrs. Keen

When Mr. Champion rebid two hearts, Mrs. Keen's hand improved above minimum values over all, with a raise to three hearts. This was all Mr. Champion needed to go on to a game contract.

He won the opening club lead with the ace in dummy and decided his chances were better if he went for a cross-ruff instead of pulling trumps. He was right.

At trick two he led a small spade from dummy and put in the nine when Mr. Masters played low. Mr. Abel won and continued with the jack of clubs. Dummy won with the king and Mr. Champion discarded the jack of clubs. Dummy won with the king and Mr. Champion discarded the jack of diamonds. He led another spade and ducked it, losing to the ace. He ruffed the club return in his hand and led another spade, ruffing it in dummy as Mr. Abel discarded a diamond. Now he led a low trump to the king and cashed the ace and king of diamonds.

He ruffed another spade with a low trump in dummy, which gave him a total of eight tricks.

He still had the ace of hearts in his hand and the queen in dummy. He ruffed a diamond with the ace and dummy's queen won the tenth and game-going trick.

Douglas Day

FORT LANGLEY, B.C. (CP) — Surrounded by the bric-a-brac of a century ago, Premier Bennett and his cabinet met in the "big house" Friday commemorating Douglas Day and British Columbia's 102nd birthday.

The big house, reconstructed in 1958 as an exact replcia of the old Hudson's Bay Company trading post, is part of a museum and fort on the banks of the Fraser here.

At a banquet Friday, the premier paid tribute to the founders of the fort, B.C.'s first capital.

Dr. C. E. Gordon of the University of B.C. department of archeology told of the Indians of the area and said discoveries show that Indians of the Fraser River existed in the Yale area 9,000 years ago.
