Britain issues warning to East Berlin regime

World News Briefs

ELISABETHVILLE, The Congo (Reuters)—About 100 Swedish troops of the United Nations force in the Congo were rushed to Kamina today following a squabble between the UN and the Katanga provincial government over rights to the former Belgian base.

The Katanga government threatened, in a communique issued from the office of President and Premier Moise Tshombe Tuesday night, to "put the base out of action" unless its sovereignty is respected "over this integral part of Katanga territory."

Tshombe threatens UN with loss of security

ELISABETHVILLE, The Congo (AP)—Premier Moise Tshombe of secessionist Katanga province threatened Tuesday to put the former Belgian army base of Kamina out of action unless the United Nations hands over its security.

A communique said the Katanga government wants to make sure it has sovereignty over the base. It is in Katanga, 260 miles northwest of Elisabethville.

When Tshombe visited Kamina Monday to say goodbye to the Belgian forces leaving the base, he is reported to have shouted at UN officials. There were also angry scenes in his office here when UN representatives visited him to discuss the situation.

The base is of top strategic value in the fight between Tshombe, who has declared his province independent, and Congolese Premier Patrice Lumumba, who has threatened to invade Katanga to end the secession.

The UN, committed to a strictly neutral role in the dispute between Tshombe and Lumumba, wants its troops to be the only ones on the base.

It was learned that Tshombe warned the UN that unless they were prepared to hand over security of the base to the Katanga army, he would block the runways there with bulldozers, trucks and oil drums. He told them that if necessary he would call on the 15,000 Negro workers at the base to carry out his threat.

Boatman fined $75, impaired

Monday afternoon in court, James Innes, 48, of Porcher Island was fined $75 on a charge under the Canada Shipping Act, Small Vessels Regulations of operating a boat while impaired. A charge of possession of an offensive weapon against Innes was dismissed.

Innes had piloted his boat, Porcher 65, to the Babcock Fisheries wharf August 25 in an attempt to sell halibut to the company.

William Robert Bingham, manager of Babcock Fisheries said: "I told him to go away as he had halibut which was out of season."

Innes, being intoxicated refused, and stayed at the wharf, insisting that Bingham buy his fish.

Bingham testified that he hosed Innes until he was completely soaked but he still would not leave.

"He went below and a few minutes later I heard an explosion like a rifle and something, which I thought was a bullet, struck the building behind me."

When RCMP boarded Innes' boat at Oceanside Cannery, they found a 30-30 rifle in the boat's cabin.

Magistrate Applewhaite, in dismissing the charge, stated that he was satisfied that Innes had discharged the rifle, but he didn't feel it was discharged with the purpose of committing a crime in mind, rather it was done in a fit of temper.

Police reinforce city border gate

LONDON (AP)—Britain, in an evident warning to the East Berlin Communist regime, today reaffirmed the Western powers' determination to treat any attack on West Berlin as an attack on itself.

The statement by a foreign office spokesman was made in reaction to the imposition of a partial blockade of West Berlin by the East Germans.

The state department issued this statement in Washington:

"It is not our practice to dignify propaganda statements by the East German regime. It is obvious, however, that in this instance, as in others in the past, the danger to peace in Berlin lies in the aggressive threats constantly being made by the Soviet puppet regime in East Germany.

. . . Berlin is not now and never has been on East German soil."

BERLIN (Reuters)—A meeting between Western military commanders here and Mayor Billy Brandt was called today as Communist East Germany clanked down the Iron Curtain for five days across the East-West Berlin border.

Just after midnight, reinforced East German police barred West Germans from using the Brandenburg gate separating the two sections of the city.

The East German restrictions apply to all West Germans who do not have an East German residence permit. Foreigners are not affected.

Several minutes after midnight, a West German sports car tried to pass into East Berlin but was turned back. A number of West German cars were let through from the east without trouble.

The restrictions were part of "necessary measures" ordered by the East German government to prevent East German territory being "misused" for a series of refugee meetings by West German expatriates from former East Germany and Poland.

Th meetings open in West Berlin tomorrow and last until Sunday.

In Bonn, diplomatic observers, noting that the border closing was for a limited time, interpreted the move as an attempt to assert border-control rights which the Russians have been seeking to give the East Germans for some time.

Saskatchewan Premier enters election fight

VANCOUVER (CP) — Saskatchewan's Premier T. C. Tommy Douglas stepped into the busy British Columbia hustings Tuesday night and drew an audience second only to that of Premier W. A. C. Bennett some nights ago in the province's capital.

In Vernon civic arena before 1,500 persons, Mr. Douglas refuted charges by Premier Bennett that Saskatchewan had suffered under a CCF government.

The population in the 1951 census was 821,000, he said "and now its 907,000."

Investment, both public and private, was $690,000,000 last year Mr. Douglas said, compared with $241,000,000 in 1948.

"That should clear up Premier Bennett's statement," he said.

Lawyer urges support for International Law

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (CP) — Renault St. Laurent, president of the Canadian Bar Association, today urged the United States and Russia to give full support to the International Court of Justice, saying the rule of law must apply among nations if civilization and humanity are to survive in the nuclear age.

"National disarmament and the rule of law between nations must come hand in hand," said the Quebec lawyer, son of former Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent, in a speech before the 8,000 delegates of the American Bar Association's annual meeting.

The association is locked in controversy on the question of whether to support or oppose an American law which in effect gives the U.S. a vote over the International Court. President Eisenhower has repeatedly urged Congress to eliminate this restrictive power but without success.

In the past the association sided with the president on the issue but this year a special committee split on the problem and tossed it into the general body for a vote in the next day or two.

St. Laurent suggested modern science has created such terrifying power "that the use of force to settle international disputes has really ceased to be a practical proposition."

"What we have today is an unstable balance of terror. Yet no great nation is going willingly to give up its own forces without the assurance that its neighbors, like itself, will be subject to a rule of law and subject to a law which is enforceable. In other words, national disarmament and the rule of law between nations must come hand in hand."
