Orioles stay with Yanks as Sox home run nulled

By WHITNEY MARTIN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

A home run is a home run is a home run, as the late Gertrude Stein might have said, and the Chicago White Sox thoroughly agree.

If they are wrong, they are wrong at the top of their voice, as noted Sunday when they protested so vehemently, when Ted Kluszewski's three run pinch-hit homer against the Baltimore Orioles was declared null and void by umpire Ed Hurley, that Nellie Fox was booted from the game and sparks were shooting from the ears of his teammates.

The Orioles were ruled 3-1 winners slicing the New York Yankees' lead to two games. The Yankees split with the Detroit Tigers, dropping the opener 6-2 and taking the nightcap, 8-5; Cleveland Indians whipped Washington Senators 9-1, and Boston Red Sox took a pair from Kansas City Athletics 2-1 and 5-4.

Saturday, New York defeated Cleveland 7-4 and 3-0, Kansas City edged Baltimore 5-3, Washington won 4-1 over Detroit and Chicago beat Boston 9-6.

NO PITCH CALL

Hurley said he called "no pitch" before Milt Pappas threw the ball Big Klu made disappear. Hurley, umpiring at third base, said he called time to tell two White Sox players, Earl Torgeson and Floyd Robinson, they were not warming up in the proper area. Klu then flied to centre for the final out.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

The Pittsburgh Pirates still held their leading margin in the National League race today, but through no fault of their own.

The Bucs dropped their third straight to the suddenly revitalized St. Louis Cardinals Sunday, 5-4, but the Milwaukee Braves, with unusual solicitude, kept their 5½ game distance by getting themselves whomped by the San Francisco Giants, 10-2.

In other National League games Cincinnati defeated Los Angeles, 9-3, and the Chicago Cubs edged out the Philadelphia Phillies, 8-6.

The Cardinals not only swept their series with the Pirates, but moved up to a virtual tie for second place with Milwaukee. They are only one point behind the Braves.

WIFU teams break ties tonight

By The Canadian Press

Four teams were scheduled to go into action tonight to break two tie positions in the Western Interprovincial Football Union.

In Vancouver, British Columbia Lions and Edmonton Eskimos meet in Empire Stadium, each team with four points in the WIFU standings.

The Saskatchewan Roughriders meet Calgary Stampeders in Calgary's new McMahon Stadium, each team with a single point.

In the B.C.-Edmonton fight it will be a battle to see which team ranks second below the powerful Winnipeg Blue Bombers, unbeaten in five starts this season and heading the standings with 10 points.

Bombers added to their already-considerable league stature Saturday night by storming to a 27-0 win over Saskatchewan and running their for-and-against total to an impressive 168-65.

Lions have won two, lost two; Edmonton two and one, and Saskatchewan and Calgary each have lost three and tied one.

B.C. DEFENCE WEAK

Coach Wayne Robinson said Sunday films of the last Edmonton-B.C. clash showed Lions defensive wasn't adjusting properly to Edmonton offensive formation.

Esks downed Robinson's Lions 33-14.

Edmonton will be carrying the injury disadvantage into the game, with linebacker Ted Tully and guard Art Walker both out.

OLYMPIC ROUNDUP

Competition resumes today, in shadow of an official, American swimming protest

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ROME (CP)—The 17th Olympic Games were handed back to the athletes today in the fading shadow of an American wailing wall.

Outraged United States officials, stewing over the lack of hard-won gold medals, rushed into the breach on the off-day Sabbath with a hastily formed debating team.

The debaters lost, too.

The bitterness arose over the first-place award given Australia's John Devitt Saturday in the final of the men's 100-metre freestyle swim.

The finish was the closest imaginable. When the judges' decision was announced the American contingent lodged an official protest.

PROTEST REJECTED

An appeal jury of the International Swimming Federation met Sunday and rejected the protest, declining to overrule the first-place judges at Olympic pool.

The lamentations and uproar were renewed in greater volume. The Americans were sizzling with claims of robbery, achaic judging methods and anti-American bias. It all got nowhere.

Meanwhile, the Americans, rivals were winning championships in the aquatic events where United States prowess is acknowledged.

Anita Lonsbrough, British girl who holds the world record in the women's 200-metre breaststroke, broke her own record Saturday in winning the gold medal. She outswam Wiltrud Urselmann of Germany, who also broke the old mark, in the remarkable time of 2:49.5. The old record was 2:50.3.

U.S. string broken

Ingrid Kramer, 17-year-old German girl, won the women's springboard diving championship, snapping a string of U.S. victories that began in 1920. Mrs. Paula Jean Pove of the U.S. had to settle for a silver medal.

Two Canadians gained sixth-position placings at Olympic pool. Irene MacoDnald of Kelowna, B.C., finished sixth after being in contention until the last few dives.

Dick Pound of Montreal placed sixth in the spring that featured Devitt and Larson. Both the Australian and the American were officially timed in 55.2 seconds, breaking the Olympic record of 55.4 held by Jon Henricks of Australia.

The U.S. 400-metre medley relay swimming team redeemed American prestige by winning a semi-final in world-record time of 4:08.2, breaking an Australian mark of 4:10.4. Canada's quartet swam second to the Americans but were outdistanced by nearly 20 yards. The Canadians easily qualified for the final, however, with their time of 4:15.3.

Breaks own record

Dawn Fraser, Australian swimming queen, broke her own Olympic record of 1:01.4 in winning a semi-final heat in the women's 100 - metre freestyle. Mary Stewart, 14-year-old Vancouver girl, was fifth in the same heat, barely qualifying with her time of 1:04.2.

The Americans appeared well on their way to a title in the men's springboard diving competition. Sam Hall and Gary Tobian were one-two on points after Saturday's semi-final. Ernie Meissner of Vancouver was seventh.

Before competition started on a broad front today, six gold medals had been won. Three have gone to Italian cyclists.

Germany was on top of the unofficial point standing with 34 points. Italy had 30, followed by the United States with 17 and Russia and Britain with 14 each. Canada had two points, earned on the two sixth-place finishes.

Cyclist dies

ROME (AP)—Italian authorities launched an investigation today into the death of Danish Olympic cyclist Knud Enemark Jensen.

Ferdinando Cocucci, Rome's deputy attorney-general, said authorities "did not exclude the possibility" that Jensen had taken stimulants before the opening Olympic race last Friday. The 23-year-old cyclist collapsed during the race and died shortly afterward.

Immediately after Jensen died, doctors attributed his death to a brain hemorrhage brought on by sunstroke.

An autopsy was conducted Sunday. Cocucci said that until the results of it are known, it would not be possible to give the exact cause of death.

Peeping Toms

Rome's 90-degree heat has defeated one effort of the girls at the Olympic Village to defeat Peeping Toms.

Girls discovered the peepers using the elevated highway, Corso France, as an observation platform. They blocked up their windows with paper. This works when the windows are closed.

But the soaring mercury has forced the girls to open the windows. They say the Toms on the corso use binoculars.

Sent home

ROME (AP) — Austrian officials are furious over the performance of their middleweight boxer, Egon Rusch. They told reporters he put up such a poor show against South Africa's Van home.

Kelowna's MacDonald places in high diving

ROME (CP)—Irene MacDonald of Kelowna, B.C., qualified today for the final of the Olympic women's high diving title.

The veteran Canadian competitor was eliminated in the springboard championship Saturday, an event she placed third in at Melbourne four years ago.

Miss MacDonald was ranked ninth among 12 qualifiers for the high diving final. The field was trimmed from 18 entrants.

Canada has not had a competitor in the Olympic high diving competition before. At the Pan-Amreican Games in Chicago last year, Miss MacDonald took fourth in the high tower event.

Blonde Ingrid Kramer, gold medalist in Saturday's springboard diving, led today's qualifiers.

The 17-year-old from Dresden, East Germany, had 56.30 points after completion of the four morning dives.

Mrs. Paula Jean Pope, the unsuccessful American favorite in the springboard, was second with 54.70.

Russia's Ninel Krutova, European champion, was third at 53.38.

The 27-year-old Miss MacDonald making her sixth appearance at an international competition, picked up 51.31 points.

The finals will be held Tuesday afternoon.

Sportsmanship shown

A Russian competitor in the Olympic pentathlon fencing competition walked over and changed the scoreboard result Saturday when an umpire wrongly awarded him a point against his American opponent.

Lt.-Col. John W. Russell won the bout against Russian world champion Igor Novikob, but the umpire scored the win for Novikov.

It was an obvious mistake and Novikov went to the scoreboard and made the change. Russell patted him on the back.
