Argentina Air Force 'To Toe Line'

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—Government sources said today that Argentina's defiant air force men must come to terms with President Pedro Aramburu's provisional regime or face a little lesson in discipline.

Fear was expressed that the quarrel might lead to shooting unless a compromise was reached, but Aramburu was said to be confident that his support in the army and navy would force the air force dissidents to toe the line.

Navy vessels were reported moving this morning toward Buenos Aires in a pointed show of support for the government.

Highly placed quarters said Aramburu was considering taking "police measures" against the air force factions if they persisted in their objection to his plan to postpone national elections. Aramburu announced Saturday that he was delaying the voting from this fall to Feb. 23, 1958.
