SPORT SHOTS

Rugged Freddie Cochrane won the world welterweight boxing title 10 years ago at Newark, N.J., by outpointing champion Fritzie Zivic in a rough-and-tumble 15-rounder. Cochrane, 4-1 underdog in the betting, was given a close decision loss of one round for a low blow and Zivic's gallant closing surge.

Gene Tunney resigned the world heavyweight boxing championship and retired from the ring 23 years ago today, a few days after he had knocked out Tom Heeney in 11 rounds at Yankee Stadium in New York. Tunney had won the tile from Jack Dempsey at Philadelphia in 1926 and won another decision over Dempsey at Chicago in 1927.

Stan Horne of Montreal Islesmere captured the Millar Trophy, emblematic of the Canadian Professional Golf Match Play championship, three years ago at Toronto. Horne finished one-up over Rudolph Huot of Quebec City. Horne previously won this title in 1946.

Blackwood on Bridge

By Easley Blackwood

After serving a long sentence as a kibitzer, Mr. New finally got in the game. This is the third deal in his first rubber. He hadn't done so well up to this point but when he picked up the South cards in today's hand he felt a little better.

Following three passes, he opened with a forcing bid of two hearts. Holding less than one plus honor tricks, Mr. Champion replied with two no trump. Mr. New then tried three diamonds and Mr. Champion bid three spades. Here Mr. New found himself in a spot. He couldn't bid three no trump on account of the club weakness and apparently his partner wasn't interested in either of the red suits. He finally decided to raise to fair spades even though he held only two cards in that suit.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	2 H
Pass	2 NT	Pass	3 D
Pass	3 S	Pass	4 S

"Where did you get that two-bid?" demanded Mr. Champion when the dummy went down.

"I had five and a half quick tricks," replied Mr. New.

"Look," said Mr. Champion, "I don't care how many quick tricks you had. If I didn't have better than a trick in my hand, how did you expect to make game? And if I did have that much I would reply to your one bid. Don't open with a two-bid unless you've got at least nine winners in your own hand including at least four honor tricks."

Mr. Champion then set about the task of making four spades. He won the opening diamond lead in dummy with the king, cashed the ace of diamonds, the ace of hearts, then the king of diamonds on which he discarded his third diamond. Next he led a small diamond from the board and ruffed it with the deuce of spades when Mr. Dale discarded a small heart.

The spade finesse was now taken, Mr. Dale winning with the king and returning a spade to dummys ace. Dummy's last diamond was now led and ruffed by Mr. Champion with the eight of spades. The jack of spades was Mr. Champion's last trick. Down two.

"Well, I read a book," said Mr. New, foolishly reopening the argument, "and it said to open with a forcing bid when you have 5½ tricks."

"Do me a favor—burn that book, will you?" was Mr. Champion's final remark.
