PIONEER OF CITY DIES

H. L. Johnston Was In Engineering Service of Railway Here In Early Days

It will be with a sense of much regret that old timers of Prince Rupert will learn of the death a few days ago in New Westminster of H. L. Johnston, who will be remembered as civil engineer with the railway here in the Grand Trunk Pacific construction days. He was well over 60 years of age and had been an active official of the railway until a short time before his death.

The late Mr. Johnston, besides his widow, is survived by two sons, Lloyd and Alex, and a daughter, Catherine. The family, which was very well known, left here many years ago.

Deceased was the owner of a house on Fifth Avenue East at present occupied by Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Gregg.

Good Deal of Float Ice Still in Yukon River and On Atlin and Tagish Lakes

Word reaching the city from the north is to the effect that, while the ice has been loose for some weeks now, navigation on the Yukon River and on Atlin and Tagish Lakes is far from possible. There is so much broken ice in all these waters that it is impossible for boats to get through. At the same time, it is impossible to travel by the winter modes of transportation.

People now getting through are doing so by means of airplane.

RECITAL IS FINE

Prince Rupert Music Lovers Charmed By Viggo Kihl, Toronto Pianist

To put it simply, yet truthfully, it was a memorable treat which the Ladies' Music Club afforded music lovers of Prince Rupert last night at the United Church in presenting a recital by Viggo Kihl of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, one of Canada's foremost pianists of the day. It is difficult to avoid superlatives in commenting upon the excellent hour and a half program which Mr. Kihl rendered to the keen delectation of an audience which practically filled the auditorium and which was not hesitant in expressing its approval and appreciation of his work.

Mr. Kihl's program was a versatile one which gave him opportunity to display a fine technique and a rare touch of the keyboard. In the crescendos and the prestissimos his execution was vigorous and exact. In the pianissimos and adagios, he exhibited a control that was virtually faultless. Withal, it was a performance that a community so far afield is rarely favored enough to enjoy.

Mr. Kihl took for his opening number that gentle though exacting Prelude and Five Part Fugue in C sharp minor (Well Tempered Clavichord Vol. 1 No. 4) by Bach.

Schubert's Serenade, Liszt arrangement, that great melody, executed with fine eloquence and deep feeling, completely won the audience and proved one of the outstanding numbers of the program.

The demand for an encore which followed prompted Mr. Kihl to give Beethoven's Andante in F. Major, with its characteristic melody, vagarious basses and wandering trebles, and a fitting prelude to that old favorite, Beethoven's Sonata in C Major, perhaps better known as the Waldstein Sonata, which was to follow. It was in this impetuous sonata, with its alternate stateliness, rippling melodies and picturesque climaxes, that Mr. Kihl was enabled to demonstrate the great power of his technique and the wonderful effectiveness of his control.

A long and varied number was given over to Chopin music, often difficult to appreciate than which, however, there is none more loved when comprehended. First came the Nocturne in D Flat Major, Op 27, No. 2, liquid sweet under Mr. Kihl's hand which made every note come clear and every tone come true. Three etudes—Op. 10, No. 12 in C Minor, Op. 10, No. 3 in E Major and Op. 10, No. 7 in C Major—followed. These were invigorating and the last galloping number was particularly impressive owing to the technical skill of the artist. Barcarolle Op. 60, concluding number of this suite, was more virile than its title might imply.

At this point, Mr. Kihl interjected for an encore an easily comprehendible arrangement by Rubenstein of the ever popular "Turkish March."

Daring modern harmony gave novelty to Triana from "Iberia" by Albeniz. Perhaps, it was Mr. Kihl's treatment that made it understandable for, although unfamiliar to most, it was spontaneously appreciated.

Valse de Concert Op. 47, Glazounoff-Clumenfeld, was a happy culminating number. Forcefully working the whole keyboard, Mr. Kihl demonstrated all his talents in an obvious refrain, cleverly punctuated with skilful denouements.

It was a testimonial to Mr. Kihl's fine execution throughout of an entirely memorized program, with no relieving numbers, that his audience was loath to rise even when the program said finis. His hearers could have listened much longer but the fact that they could not possibly made for even greater appreciation.

C. E. Cullin and Ernest Anderson presided at the door and M. H. Blois and James Farquhar acted as ushers.

After the recital, a reception was held at Clyffside, the home of Mrs. R. L. McIntosh, president of the Ladies' Music Club, where members of that organization and their friends were given the opportunity of meeting Mr. Kihl personally and partaking of delicious refreshments.
