Alberta rink tops in Canada

CALGARY (CP) — Hector Gervais says the greatest moment of his life came Friday when a lone rock in the house gave him the Canadian curling championship.

A week of gruelling matches and narrow victories boiled down to that single encounter. It brought Skip Gervais and his Edmonton rink a 10-9 victory over Ontario's Tom Caldwell of Orillia and the eighth title for Alberta in the 32-year history of the round-robin Dominion matches.

Opening lead: Four of ♣

Last week, we presented a hand from the current television series, "Championship Bridge with Charles Goren," where a pair of contestants bid and made a no trump slam off two aces. In the interests of justice, we are presenting today another excerpt from the show where a pair of experts arrived at a grand slam missing one ace and met with a swift retribution.

The trouble started with South's jump shift response. While his hand does possess great playing strength and slam prospects are bright if a fit can be uncovered in one of his suits, he should make a simple forcing response of two hearts in order to leave the maximum room for exploration. An immediate jump shift by responder says, not only, "Partner, I think we can make a slam," but also, "I know where to play the hand."

When South bid three hearts, West feared that his opponents could make a slam and, in an effort to crowd the bidding, he jumped to four spades. North freely raised to five hearts. Though he has only two trumps, they are very fashionable ones and, opposite a jump shift, he surely has the required values.

East sensed from the sound of the bidding that the adversaries surely had a slam and, rather than wait for them to bid it, he leaped into six spades hoping to the put the pressure the the opposition. South chose now to bid seven diamonds, perhaps a questionable choice. North returned to seven hearts which East doubled expected to cash the club ace. It may be noted that, under the convention, the double of a slam bid by the player not on lead calls for an unusual lead, generally the dummy's first bid suit.

The four of clubs was opened and won by East's ace. A trump was returned placing declarer in the dummy. The diamond finesse was tried and, while it succeded, West was void in diamonds and ruffed the trick. Another trump was taken by dummy and three discards were obtained on the high spade and club honors. The repeat of the diamond finesse enabled declarer to claim the balance for a two trick set. A sad way, it seemed to this observer, to dissipate a handful of assets.

Salmon Arm wins

VANCOUVER (CP) — Salmon Arm took a comfortable 42-24 game away from Victoria Saturday night to win the B.C. High School Girls' Basketball tournament.

Going ahead 7-5 in the first quarter the Okanagan team was ahead 14-7 at the half. After three quarters Salmon Arm was leading 20-17.

For brief moments in the final quarter only two points separated the teams, but Salmon Arm forged ahead in the game's last seven minutes.
