FISH PRICES IN BRITAIN

trade at the moment is how to dispose of the surplus.

"There will, I am sure, be no dumping if we can possibly avoid it. The local Fish Meal Company, I hear, are sending a train load of inferior quality to Shields so that fish with which they cannot deal can be reduced to fish meal, and in every way, up to the present time, we are handling the situation all right.

"We have had these times before and we will have them again. No one can control fish supplies. They come in gluts when often least expected, and the same applies to scarcity of supplies.

"It is a position we have had to face many times before. This is one of those periodical gluts that we get, and owing to our enormous catching power in Hull it is more manifest here than in any other place. We are actually selling more fish than we have ever done before by a tremendous amount, for our landings last year were 54,000 tons in excess of the previous year, and that increase is being sustained during 1931.

"Trawlers undoubtedly are being run at a loss, and while we realize the seriousness of the position we are not getting into a panic about it. The whole position is one of uncertainty, but we are not going to stop, sit down and cry about it."

Questioned as to whether the landing of a greater variety of fish at Hull would solve the situation, Mr. Hudson pointed out that the Hull trawler owners were handling a class of fish they had always handled. He added that despite the difficulties experienced in disposing of catches not a boat had, as yet, missed the tide.

Speaking of the salted fish trade, J. W. Johnson, of the firm of Messrs. Johnson and Knudtzon, said the production was exceeding consumption.

"We are," he said, "having to do a larger volume of business in order to cut down expenses, for prices of selling have dropped 30% or 40% in the last six months. We are up against bad internal conditions in the countries with which we deal. We do business with Spain, Brazil, Portugal, Italy and the West Indies and Cuba, but the revolution in Spain and the fluctuations of currency in other countries have made our problem a very difficult one."

At Grimsby

Unemployment is increasing daily in Grimsby as a consequence of the slump in the fishing industry. The tying-up of trawlers has resulted in hundreds of fishermen being thrown out of work, and now the female labor at the port is being seriously affected.

Braiders employed by the Coal, Salt and Tanning Company Ltd., and Consolidated Fisheries Ltd., have been put on short time. The week before last nearly 150 girls were stood off by the Coal, Salt and Tanning Co., and although 57 returned to work last week, it was expected that a further batch will be stood off this week. Women employed at the Consolidated Fisheries braiding works in Granville Street and Sixhills Street are also being placed on half-time.

Men employed in the fishing industry and its subsidiary trades continue to register at the Employment Exchange, the total number of unemployed receiving benefit on May 18 being 5078, including 4032 men, 125 boys, 683 women and 238 girls.

During the past fortnight unemployment among fishermen has increased at an alarming rate. On May 18 there were 132 trawler engineers on the register and 230 fishermen. Last week these figures had increased to 175 trawler engineers and 320 fishermen.

Aberdeen

It is several months now since one big Aberdeen exporting firm found it necessary to curtail its staff considerably. It was then hoped that the phase was only temporary, but succeeding months have shown an intensification of the depression instead of the amelioration hoped for. The period may be described as the most prolonged as well as the most severe that has been experienced for many years. Although inshore North Sea boats are still actively engaged, the longer voyagers are making nothing of their trips, and the sequel is bound to be the "tying-up" of a considerable section of the fleet.

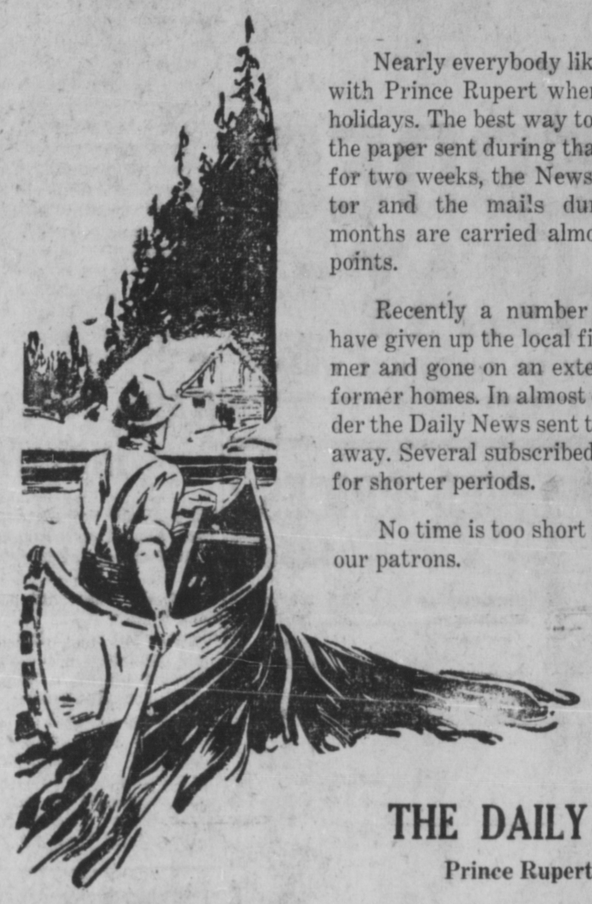
Take The DAILY NEWS with you When Going on Summer Holidays



Nearly everybody likes to keep in touch with Prince Rupert when away for their holidays. The best way to do this is to order the paper sent during that time. If it is only for two weeks, the News is a welcome visitor and the mails during the summer months are carried almost daily to most points.

Recently a number of Scandinavians have given up the local fishing for the summer and gone on an extended visit to their former homes. In almost every case they order the Daily News sent them while they are away. Several subscribed for a year, others for shorter periods.
