Contempt charge decision fails to fix penalties

TORONTO (CP)—The Globe and Mail was cited Thursday by Mr. Justice W. F. Spence of the Supreme Court of Ontario for contempt of court in connection with an account of a bribery trial which appeared in the newspaper May 30. He did not assess any penalties against the newspaper.

On May 29, defence counsel Joseph Sedgwick asked that submissions made to the court in the absence of the jury not be reported in the press. Mr. Justice Spence agreed and advised reporters at the trial.

In editions the following day the Globe and Mail recorded Mr. Sedgwick's remarks and noted the judge's agreement.

Mr. Justice Spence said Thursday the report could have prejudiced a fair trial for the three accused and said the report was a "flagrant disregard" of his order that any proceedings taking place in the absence of the jury were not to be reported.

"It was a real but quite accidental and unintentional contempt," he said. "I am satisfied that the purpose was to show the public that these three men were being given a trial with every protection of law."

At the trial Robert J. Wright, Vincent Feeley and Joseph McDermott were acquitted of a charge of conspiring to bribe an Ontario provincial police constable.

Rare disease needs steel in bones

CHICAGO (AP) — An infant boy, packed in foam rubber, was flown to Chicago from his home in Little Rock, Ark., Thursday night for surgery aimed to halt his brittle bones from cracking.

Peter Lollar, who has suffered 32 fractures since his birth 18 months ago, slept virtually throughout the flight, said his mother, Mrs. Lani Lollar, 33.

The brittle-bone condition results from a rare disease known as osteogenesis imperfecta. Peter is to enter the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children for examination to determine whether an operation called "rodding" would help his condition.

The operation involves the insertion of steel rods into bones to provide support and to absorb the pressures of weight and movement.

CUBS DOT THE FORESHORE as they pack lumber and building materials from the lowtide rocks to the grass of Digby Island at Emmerson Point. Enthusiastically aiding the construction of a scouts camping site there, they rapidly moved a large pile of sawn timber to where three buildings are being built by members of the Kinsmen Club. The cost of the project will be $2,000 and when complete will be handed over to the Prince Rupert scouts. — Staff photo by John Pain

Glacier study to be made on Yukon-Alaska borders

NEW YORK (AP)—A Canadian-American program to study the complete environment of glaciers will begin next Wednesday in the Yukon, the American Geographical Society announced Thursday.

The long-range program is sponsored by the society and the Arctic Institute of North America, a non-profit Canadian-American corporation engaged in studies of the north.

It will take place in the St. Elias Mountains, on the border between the Yukon and Alaska near the Gulf of Alaska. The area was chosen because it includes five of the longest glaciers outside the polar regions.

A field party made up of institute staff members and led by Dr. Walter A. Wood, president of the society, will set up a base camp at Kluane Lake 120 miles west of Whitehorse.

The study will investigate the region's climate, geology and botany in an effort to learn more about the earth's Ice Age.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Peterson of New Westminster, came in from the fishing grounds in their boat, Polaris, over the weekend. They will work back to the southern waters during the season. The Polaris is a 38-foot diesel-powered gillnetter. It is very comfortably finished and well equipped and the Petersons make it their home all the year round.

Mrs. Peterson is an accomplished artist and between fish hauls and house keeping (or perhaps I should say boat keeping) she spends her time painting. A number of her oils are at present on exhibition in Vancouver.

Frank Spence aged 9 years went in to Prince Rupert by aircraft on Monday evening. He had a fractured arm and was admitted to the General Hospital.

Oliver Gray (11) was doing a history test on Monday afternoon in Grade 5. He was asked to write down the motto of the RCMP. "Maintain the Right." He wrote "Keep to the Right" which may be a good idea for the motorist. —Oliver must have been thinking of motoring at the time.
