the difference between a job . . . and a career

In a job, a man puts in his eight hours day by day and that's that. But to embark on a career, a man must plan to put his whole life into it. Dentistry is a career because the demands on a man are beyond the bounds of a mere job. He must devote himself to it — for the rest of his life. And, if he believes in his ability, has the skill, and the desire to help his fellow man, he can.

Dentistry is not all demands, however. In return comes a deep satisfaction in caring for and protecting members of the community, a well-earned income, and recognition from the community.

If you feel that dentistry is the career to which you wish to devote yourself — your time and energies — we invite you to write for our informative pamphlet, Dentistry As A Career. There is a challenge to be met. Perhaps you are one of the few able to meet it.

Mother, son reunion takes place after 26 years of separation

By GLADYS BLYTH

A separation of 26 years and a distance of 5,000 miles was bridged for a mother and son when Mrs. Lawrence Madden flew via Toronto, from Miami, Florida to meet Edward Wampler and his family of Port Edward at the Terrace airport May 16, just two days after Mother's Day.

It was a happy occasion for all concerned. The Wampler children, Joanne 12, Dianne 8 and Richard 6, were thrilled to see their grandmother for the first time and adopted her immediately. To Mr. Wampler she was everything he remembered.

"Eddie hasn't changed much. He's just as I remembered him as a young boy," says Mrs. Madden.

When asked how it felt to see her only son again after all the intervening years, she smiled happily, "It's a wonderful feeling . . . something you can't explain. Why, I'm flying on a cloud."

Mr. Wampler who served with the American Navy during the Second World War has since then settled in Port Edward where he works for Imperial Oil Company. With his family he has taken his mother on trips to Kitimat and Terrace, spent a weekend at the hot springs, toured Prince Rupert and introduced her to his many friends.

A highlight was when Nelson Brother's cannery operated for a day canning salmon that had been trolled and frozen and he was able to take her through the cannery.

Mrs. Madden who leaves Thursday for her home in Miami, which is almost kitty-corner from Port Edward on the map of North America, says she is greatly impressed with the north and what she has seen on her visit here. Although the temperature is below the 90 to 100 degrees of heat to which she is accustomed, she would like to return soon again. And she is certain it will be a lot sooner than another 26 years.

Changes ahead for South Korea

The junta said the provisional constitution would be known as the "basic laws of national reconstruction."

Informed sources said the "basic laws" were expected to define the military administration as an interim government with the tasks of eliminating communism from South Korea and establishing democratic government through free general elections.
