THE FIRST REAL CANADIAN MONEY

History relates that Canada, in 1817, "was too poor to afford the luxury of a metallic circulating medium, and the development of trade and agriculture was hampered by the lack of facilities for exchange."

American money, also British and French and some Spanish and Portuguese, was used—all subject to fluctuating rates of exchange and causing monetary confusion. There was no Canadian money, either coin or paper.

But in 1817, when the Bank of Montreal was started, its directors—merchants who knew what Canadian business urgently needed—immediately provided a paper currency (the Bank's own bills in small denominations) and later copper coins. These Bank of Montreal issues were the first real Canadian money.

Through 117 years since then, the Bank of Montreal's notes have performed a useful function, as Canadian business has grown from small beginnings to its present extensive proportions. These notes have provided a sound, dependable and elastic currency, their volume automatically expanding and contracting with the changing demands of trade.

Notes of the Bank now in circulation amount to $35,000,000, or about one-fourth of the entire commercial bank note currency of Canada.

The Bank's resources ($759,000,000) are likewise about one-fourth of the total resources of the Canadian commercial banks. These figures indicate the extent to which the Bank of Montreal participates in Canadian business activity.

WHIFFLETS
From the Waterfront

According to reports in well-informed quarters the big Canadian National Coast Steamships liner Prince Robert, which has been tied up for the past two or three years at Vancouver, is to be operated during the coming summer in a number of special runs on the Skagway route augmenting the service to be operated regularly by the steamers Prince Rupert and Prince George. Before going back into commission, an extensive overhaul job will have to be carried out on the Prince Robert and it is understood that the vessel will be brought to the local dry dock for the work.

The steamer Prince Charles, according to report, is to be shortly commissioned on the Queen Charlotte Island run between Prince Rupert and Vancouver in place of the Prince John which is to be tied up here and which will be given a general overhaul. Some overhaul work is to be carried out on the Prince Charles before she goes back into service.

Meantime, the annual overhaul of the steamer Prince Rupert, a job which will extend over six weeks or so, is now starting. Chief Engineer W. E. Baillie with his engine room crew and several deckhands having come north from Vancouver to join the vessel. Following the work on the Rupert being completed, the Prince George will be going in to the local yard for her overhaul.

Union steamer Cardena, Capt Ernest Georgeson, northbound from Vancouver to Prince Rupert, was at Wadham's Cannery in Rivers Inlet at 1 o'clock this morning. The vessel is due here tomorrow evening. On next week's voyage north from Vancouver the Cardena will make a call at Surf Inlet with men and machinery for the Princess Royal gold mine.

The Alberta Wheat Pool's local elevator is still expecting the British fregihter Vancouver City here about January 16 or 17 to load a full cargo of grain for the United Kingdom or Continent. Grain continues to arrive from the prairies to keep the local house full as grain is taken away.
