Everyone admits that this has been a poor garden season but, in spite of all that, we must also admit that there have been some very fine displays of flowers in a good many gardens and that the effort was worth while. The chief drawback has been that some of the flowers have not been tied up when they needed it and the result has been disastrous. In a wet season the growth is apt to be very heavy and, unless the plants are looked after, the loss is proportionately heavy.

The season has also shown that in a wet summer Coltness dahlias are a sure bet, that begonias started early will show color all summer in spite of the weather that large heavy roses often do not open well whereas the semi-double varieties defy weather conditions. Sweet peas need plenty of sun and so do zinnias, ageratum, poppies and a number of other plants which are sometimes grown here.

May we remind local people that this is the time to start next year's garden. Most of the spring bulbs should be bought now and planted next month or as soon as they arrive. English, Dutch and Spanish irises should go into the ground soon so that they may be become established for next season. They may also be planted in the spring but best results are obtained by fall planting. If they are put into well drained soil six inches deep they will usually come through the winter quite well. The books say four inches but in this climate if the soil is dry six inches has been found to be quite correct.

Other bulbs to plant soon are daffodils, narcissi, hyacinths, tulips, grape hyacinths, snowdrops, crocuses, chiondoxas and scillas.

When ordering tulips be sure to decide whether you want the early low growing varieties or the later Darwins. The long stemmed Darwins often have to be staked as they grow taller here than in most places. When the book tells you that a plant grows eighteen inches high, count on two feet in Prince Rupert.

I have to ask pardon of gardeners who live in the interior as most of my notes are written particularly for Prince Rupert people. Conditions at Hazelton or Smithers or Burns Lake or Vanderhoof are quite different and flowers which grow well there may not succeed here.

This year I had very good results with regal lilies. The main thing is to give them good drainage. Some people say they will not succeed without rubble but a mixture of coal and wood ashes with the soil seems to answer the purpose almost as well. Next year I plan to use rubble but I do not expect any better results than I am now getting. Under no cirucumstances must they be in a place where the water cannot get away from them such as in rotting muskeg without ashes or sand mixed with it.—H. F. P.

TWO GOOD COMEDIES

Joe E. Brown and Jones Family Pictures Here on First of Week Double Bill

Joe E. Brown's latest picture "Riding on Air" and another of the series of Jones Family comedies "Off to the Races" comprise an entertaining double bill program coming to the Capitol Theatre here at the first of this week.

Mysterious aeriel smugglers, a high speed romance, rivalry betweeen two small town newspaper correspondents and a device for controlling of airplanes in flight by radio beam are all woven into the exciting basis of "Riding on Air." Brown portrays one of the correspondents whose interest in the radio beam invention and whose determination to catch the smugglers involve him in hilarious complications. Guy Kibbee plays the part of an oily stock swindler while Florence Roice is the lovely blonde for whom Brown and his rival, Vinton Haworth, battle.

"Off to the Races" has to do with country fair horse racing and it is said to be a real mirth producer. The players of former pictures of the series are retained in the persons of Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington, Kenneth Howell, George Ernest, June Carslon, Florence Roberts and Billy Mahan with the addition of Russell Gleason and Slim Summerville.
