"O! don't the days seem lank and long,
"When all goes right and nothing goes wrong;
"And isn't your life extremely flat
"With nothing whatever to grumble at."

And who wouldn't take a chance these days of having nothing whatever to grumble at? W. S. Gilbert would almost make us believe that the chronic grumblers' days are short.

Anyway, you'll have nothing to grumble at and you take no chances when you buy Albert & McCaffery's coal, the best available for twenty years and the best today.

Albert & McCaffery's coal gives you the most heat for the least money—and that's what you want.

And besides giving you the most heat, it's the most economical because—it lasts!

Next time you need coal, just phone 116 or 117 to Albert & McCaffery and order Nanaimo-Wellington for furnace and heater. For the kitchen range, ask for Egg size Balkan Minehead—Alberta sootless. It's trade name is "Inferno"—it's hot! And it lasts, too.

You deserve the best!

OF TIMELY INTEREST

in 1933 designed to give the British farmer protection. The result was that British agriculture today was comparatively prosperous. Britain had cut her imports of food supplies from 65 to 60 percent. The British policy today was: first, home produce; second, Empire produce, and then, if necessary, products from abroad.

Turning to France, Germany and Italy which he grouped, Dean Clement said that the general aim of each had three points: first self-sufficiency in food supply; second, the settling of large numbers of men and women on the land, making them conservative proprietors; third, building up of a population for defence purposes. The general result was that these countries had today greatly reduced their imports and were actually exporting some commodities which formerly they had imported.

The Danubian countries— Bulgaria, Roumania, Jugo - Slavia, Greece and Poland—were endeavoring to formulate a food production policy standing between the capitalistic policies such as those of Canada and the United States and the communistic policy of Russia. In the effort to provide work and a living for their peasants, these countries had taken over large estates and created small farms. The great competition for Canadian agriculture, Dean Clement predicted, would come from these Danubian countries more than from Russia.

Russian Agriculture

Russia had industrialized her agriculture, thus making it a large scale industry organized along specialized lines—that is, large farms operated communistically with large areas specializing in one line. Small holdings had been done away with and there was mass farm production. Some progress had been made. There had been increase in production of cereals but mass farming had not been altogether successful in stock raising, when large numbers of animals were brought together, they were more subject to epidemic. There was also lack of personal attention.

Although the picture might change, Dean Clement said he did not see a possibility of any great competition for Canada from Russian products for some time at least.

There was also new competition coming from tropical and semi-tropical countries in the matter of production of food supplies. Margarine and stock feeds were being produced from tropical seeds, nuts, etc.

Biological Changes

The important influence of biological changes in supply of agricultural prodducts was also referred to. Sheep today produced vastly more wool per animal than before. Sugar cane had been made richer in sugar content. Wheat lands could be extended through use of new type of wheat. Cows produced more milk and there was greater content of butter fat. Hens laid more eggs.

Yet, asserted the speaker, there was still an under-supply. Even if everything was distributed today there would not be enough to go round. Of course, this might soon be changed.

Dean Clement closed with a discussion of population in regard to food supply. Bulgaria, Italy and Portugal were the only countries where population had been maintained. The fact of the matter was the world was facing the possibility of an increased food supply without a corresponding increase in the number of mouths to feed. There was a steady increase in the percentage of sterility, decrease in marriage and the size of families due in many cases to economic necessity and, doubtless, in many cases, through "hesitation on the part of many parents to raise soldiers for defence."

In conclusion, the speaker emphasized the necessity of Canada as a producing country, basing its agricultural policies on changing conditions in other lands.

G. P. Lyons presided over the meeting.
