Man in the Moon

Any person required to work half as hard as the ski enthusiasts do on Sunday would go on strike immediately.

Sunday was the first fine day of spring and Jake says the plants in the garden have begun to grow already.

Gardeners are something like old soaks. They can see things that nobody else thinks of looking for.

"What does you father do?" inquired teacher from the little boy. "Anything ma tells him to do" was the quick reply.

When you wind up a clock you want it to go but when you wind up a business it is about to stop.

"This is the tenth time you have been before me," said Magistrate McClymont, severly. "Yess yer honor," smiled the drunk. "When I like a feller I usually give him all my business."

Someone once sent a country editor a bottle of liquor and, shortly after its arrival, he received for publication a wedding announcement and a notice of an auction sale which later appeared in type as follows:

"William Smith and Miss Lucy Anderson are to be disposed of at public auction at my farm one mile east of a beautiful cluster of roses on her breast and two white calves before a background of farm implements too numerous to mention in the presence of about seventy guests including two milch cows, six mules and one bobsled. Rev. Jackson tied the nuptial knot with 200 feet of hay wire and the bridal left on one good John Deere gang plow for an extended trip with terms to suit purchaser. They will be at home to their friends with one good baby buggy and a few kitchen utensils after date of sale to responsible parties and some fifty chickens."

A German traveller was astonished to find that in Canada there is such an officer of the Crown as the leader of the opposition.

"You mean to say," he ejaculated, "that this man is actually appointed to oppose the government?"

"Yes, he is."

"And he is paid for it?"

"Certainly!"

"Paid for it!" exclaimed the German. "Mein Gott, in my country we would shoot him."

VERY BUSY ON DRESSES

London Holding Her Own As Style Centre—Model House And Ideal Home Shows for April

By MOLLIE McGEE
Canadian Press Correspondent

LONDON, Feb. 21: (CP)— Four thousand British beauties will make their curtsies at five courts and a royal presentation party this year and trade figures have already begun to go up.

Caterers are jubilant and dressmakers in a dither for 10 gowns per young woman is the minimum allowance for a season's fun. One court gown can keep four girls busy for three weeks, with embroidery and what not, then cost 150 guineas (about $739). The other end of the scale is the dress made by the family dressmaker costing about $50. There is nothing to be had for less.

Advance styles shown by the big London dressmaking houses follow the lines of about 1895, tight fitted bodice and flat fronted skirt with fullness flowing generously at the back. Favored materials are of the same vintage, moire, brocade, heavy satin and taffeta. Wrist length gloves will have an innings, though not of course, for court wear.

If the royal parties do nothing else, they have been a strong factor in swinging the title of World's Style Centre to London. There it now rests, according to "the Trade." Proof offered is the number of highly-paid fashion spies now arriving to steal ideas for the coming season collections that will be shown in Berlin, Rome, New York and even Paris.

"These fashion spies used to go to Paris," a famous court dressmaker told reporters. "Although we do not like our designs being stolen we are proud that London has now become the world's fashion centre. American women particularly are anxious to wear "whats new in England. ."

The spies are usually beautifully dressed women who pose as customers. In the luxurious salons of London's court dressmakers they are shown the new season's collection by mannequins. They look at a dozen gowns, buy one, photograph mentally the rest. Then they cable descriptions to fashion houses in the world's big cities and in a few days copies are being sold as far away as Los Angeles and New York. As yet there has been no way found of copyrighting a dress design so that it cannot be duplicated.

Model House

However, while London's designs are going to other countries, ideas from America and Europe are being freely borrowed here. Advance arrangements being made for the Ideal Home Exhibition opening in April, include the building of "All-Europe House," designed by Miss Elizabeth Denby, who had spent years on a research pilgrimage in Europe studying the post-war surge of healthy- economical house-building.

She wrote a book, "Europe Rehoused" on what she discovered. Now, in collaboration with the Council of Art and Industry, she is designing and furnishing a house that combines in practical reality all the best features she found and described in her book.

From Sweden she adopts a principle of "staggering' houses so that each in a row has the maximum privacy and a sun-trap garden on its brightest side. Germany suggested the living-dining-room with cooking recess. Switzerland gave her windows that swing open like casements or fold back completely to give the utmost light and air. France provided the garbage disposal system in which ashes and waste of all kinds go direct into one sewage channel and are carried at once to the destructor.

The house, full of surprises for English contractors, will be built at a price not beyond the artisan's outlay.

Another interesting exhibition in the process of assemblage for the Ideal Home Show is a series of rooms that are all portrayals of the same room. In other words, each represents the room at a different time in its history.

Lady Annaly, daughter of the Sixth Earl of Spencer and a lover of fine period furniture, is planning the story in five replicas, placing the generations on parade, side by side from 1711 to 1939.

Stately Rooms

They have chosen for portrayal the drawing of a stately Hamptonstead house, supposed to have been designed by one of Christoper Wren's pupils. The rooms will show the changing tastes in living and entertaining as well as good period furniture.

A number of experts, connoisseurs and well known firms are assisting enthusiastically in providing the authentic furnishings and intimate belongings of the occupants.

Through the drawing-room window, an outside view shows how the Hamptonstead countryside altered generation by generation. The first scene shows an outlook over a fine garden to meadows across which Great-great- great-grandfather rode to the hounds in the days of Queen Anne. Houses creep in, then crowded streets, in the end themselves displaced by service flats.

Another exhibition at the show that will be bound to draw women's attention is "The History of Dress" a pageant in miniature of the evolution of fashion in Britain through 1,500 years, shown in 10 opochs and two special tableaux peopled by more than 200 accurately apparelled figures designed and made by a woman expert.

For having stolen lumber from the old Blythe building on Ambrose Avenue, Vernon Leroy Rowe and Nelson Warren were each fined $25, with option of fourteen days' imprisonment, in city police court yesterday afternoon. They are serving the time.

"BOYS TOWN" IS SHOWING

Outstanding Picture, Based on Reality, Is Feature Offering At Capitol Theatre

Really a most colorful, human and exciting real life story, "Boys Town," starring Spencer Tracey and Mickey Rooney in the leading roles, comes as the feature offering to the screen of the Capitol Theatre here for the first half of this week. The picture is based on the actual incorporated village of Boys Town near Omaha, Nebraska, the founder and director of which is the noted humanitarian, Father Edward J. Flanagan. Tracy plays the part of Father Flanagan and Mickey Rooney appears as one of the many problem boys.

It was from Father Flanagan's actual files, the records left by his boys, that the rich material for the picture was found. It contains every element of stirring entertainment, drama and comedy, despair and hope, tragedy and happiness.

It was Father Flanagan's wish that the film should be true to the real story of Boys Town. Accordingly, to ensure fidelity, the picture company was sent to Boys Town to film scenes and absorb spirit and atmosphere.

Henry Hull, Leslie Fenton, Gene Reynolds and little Bobs Watson are other important members of the cast.

The picture was previewed yesterday morning by local clergy who registered approval as did large audiences who saw it last night.
