BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

In many cases an unblocking play adds to the chances of making your contract — and cannot possibly lose anything.

In today's deal Mr. Meek led the ten of clubs against the skimpy three no trump contract. The usual play in this set-up would be to play the queen from the board, hoping the opener has led away from the king.

Mr. Meek

If he has, the queen will hold the trick. But as Mr. Masters saw at once, he could not win three tricks in clubs by going up with an honor in dummy, except in the extremely unlikely case where Mr. Meek had underled the king doubleton.

He tossed out that possibility as too silly to consider and decided that he would win two clubs and no more.

What did matter, then, if he won the first two or the first and third?

The main consideration was that he had to make certain of an entry in dummy to bring in the long diamond suit after it was established.

So he played the deuce of clubs from dummy and went up with the ace in his own hand. This seeming extravagance was actually the ultimate in conservatism.

Now the defenders could not keep him out of dummy unless they had two kings of clubs.

At trick two he led his lone diamond to dummy's king, cashed the ace of diamonds and discarded a low heart from his hand.

Next he led the ten of diamonds to drive out the queen. On the club return Mr. Meek won with the king and led a third club.

But dummy won this last trick and after cashing the rest of the diamonds Mr. Masters took a heart finesse and made his contract.

The result would have been different if he had won the first club with the queen in dummy. That would have left him with the ace and seven.

He could hardly overtake the ace with dummy's jack, and whenever he played the seven, Mr. Meek would play the king. Thus he would never get to the board to run the diamonds or to take the heart finesse.

MYSTERY METAL

KIRKLAN DLAKE, Ont. (CP) — A mysterious grey metal, discovered near here two years ago still defies analysis. Assayings in the United States and in Toronto have determined 13 of its elements. But the metal still is confusing experts because, although it has a high perecentage of iron, it has a low over-all specific gravity, is a non-conducter and can mark glass and hard steel easily.

Charges laid in kidnapping

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — Formal charges of kidnapping were filed against Richard Arlen Lindsey, 30, and his wife, Elaine, 23, Monday after a hair clip found in their car was identified as one worn by six-year-old Rose Marie Riddle.

Lindsey, a former Texas convict, and his wife were arrested near Livermore Sunday after a truck driver identified him as the man who enticed Rose Marie from her farm home near Shafter.
