HELP WITH YOUR THOUGHTS

When any hopeful news comes through from Europe, we find a good many people beginning to find flaws in the cause for rejoicing and also they seem to have grave doubts about the final outcome. That is not the way to help the men who are fighting our battles. Let us unite in sending across the Atlantic confident thoughts, thoughts of victory that, like our men, scoff at defeat. The poets tell us that thoughts are things. The psychologists tell us that thoughts have a profound effect on the action of men. Some religionists tell us that thoughts are much greater than actions and that mind is much greater than matter. If we project our thoughts across to Europe we help to keep our men in good cheer and we also have an effect on the people against which they are fighting. So we can help to combat the lies of that archliar Goebbels. We suggest it is poor policy ever to let a neighbor or friend or enemy hear us utter one word that would indicate doubt as to the righteousness of our cause, the ability of our men, the wisdom of our statesmen or the final outcome of the great struggle.

NO SETBACK IN NEWS

As the details of the fighting in and around the North Sea comes in, no setback seems to be experienced as a result of later developments. The British people are slow to give details for a number of reasons. It is natural for them to be reticent and careful about what they say, especially in wartime, and it is necessary to be careful not to give news to the enemy. All day yesterday the number of enemy casualties seemed to be increasing until it reached a point that indicated how great was the victory the allied forces had won.

NORWAY IS PRINCIPAL BATTLEGROUND

warships and planes endeavouring to oust the invaders.

To Drive Nazis Out

Moves are also being made to drive the Nazis out of Oslo. British warships were reported moving up the fjord while shore batteries were being reinforced by the Germans with more Nazi warships also reported to be on the way.

An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Goteborg, Sweden, said that German transports driven aground in Wednesday night's battle off the Swedish coast were still blazing and that one thousand bodies were reported floating on the water. Six of ten German transports were reported sunk following an encounter with British naval vessels in Skagerrak. Bodies of no less than three thousand German soldiers and sailors are reported to have been landed at Oslo.

Germany resorted to air bombing of civilian populations in southern Norway yesterday including Hamar, Elverum and another small town not far from the Swedish frontier which had been successively used as temporary seats of Norwegian government. King Haakon and Crown Prince Olav were reported to have had a narrow escape yesterday in an air raid. Norwegian refugees are pouring across the frontier in Sweden or northward into interior Norway.

MASERU, South Africa, April 12: (CP)—"We head you, O Chief," 100,000 Basuto tribesmen chanted as their newly-installed king, Paramount Chief Seeiso Griffith, declared his readiness to "sacrifice everything" for Britain's victory in the war.
