BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

There are many ways to make seemingly impossible contracts. Today's hand illustrates one of them. Do you see how you could avoid losing two spades, a diamond and a club, for a one-trick set? If not, you can add the suggested line of play to your repertoire and never go down in a contract like this again.

Mr. Champion

First, a word of warning about the bidding. Mrs. Keen's jump to three spades was dangerous. She had the required over-all high card strength and length in spades, but giving partner an immediate double raise without at least one high honor in his suit often leads to disaster. It's all right if partner has a minimum hand, but if he has slam aspirations, you may be in trouble.

Mr. Abel won the opening club lead with the ace. He cashed the ace of spades and was shocked to see Mr. Dale discard the deuce of clubs. Now he apparently had two sure trump losers plus a loser in each minor suit. At first, the only solution he saw was the chance of finding one opponent with the doubleton queen-jack of diamonds. But he had a much better chance than that and fortunately the light dawned before it was too late.

The answer to the problem was basically simple. It consisted of winning tricks with the small trumps in the closed hand instead of having them fall helplessly under Mr. Champion's queen and jack.

To accomplish this purpose the tricks went in the following order. At trick three, lead a club.

Mr. Dale wins with the queen and his return makes no difference. Say he leads the queen of diamonds. Win in dummy with the king, cash the ace of hearts, lead a low heart and ruff the last heart.

The bidding:

1 ♠	2 ♣	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	All Pass

Opening lead: King of clubs.

At this point you have nine tricks in the bag and you still have the king of trumps for trick number ten. What happened to that fourth loser? The answer is that two of your losers went on one trick. At the end Mr. Champion had the irritation job of ruffing his partner's good diamond with the queen of trumps.

Archbishop says Christians happy

VICTORIA (CP) — Archbishop Harold E. Sexton of the Anglican Church in British Columbia said today the new year will be the happiest to those who turn to the Christian faith.

"It will surely be the happiest for those who, in the quiet confidence of our Christian faith, are quietly disregarding the transitory and turning in patient, loyal faith to the eternal," he said in a New Year's message.

LONDON (CP)—Violinist Yehudi Menuhin's 12-year-old son, Gerrard, is starring in the Mermaid Theatre's production of "Emil and the Detectives."

Polish treasures cross border for shipment home

DERBY LINE, Vt. (CP)—A fortune in Polish art en route to its homeland after 20 years in Canada crossed the border into the United States today under heavy guard. The value of the shipment was estimated at $60,000,000.

Two huge moving vans arrived at the Canadian customs station at 5:20 a.m. and at United States customs about half an hour later.

RCMP escorted the art shipment from Quebec City to the border, Vermont state troopers took over at Derby Line.

Officials in charge of the convoy declined information about its destination or its route across New England to Boston. They indicated they would have been happier if there were less public knowledge of the shipment.

Vermont state police said patrol cars would ride at front and rear of the procession. In addition to the two vans, the convoy included several carloads of officials, who declined to identify themselves.

Twenty years of Canadian custody of the treasures came to an end, as well as 13 years of international wrangling and bargaining, as the Province of Quebec agreed to give them up.

M. Dobrosielski, a deputy of the Polish ambassador in Washington, was at the border to receive the valuable cargo.

He told reporters relations between Canada and Poland will improve, because the treasures question has been a big gulf between us."

He said they will be loaded on a Polish ship—he declined to name it—in Boston.

Treasury cheques found in canyon

VANCOUVER (CP) — A group of boys found several cartons of stolen federal treasury cheques Monday while they played in a ravine in the east end. Police said the cheques apparently were tossed there by burglars who broke into a sealed truck in Burnaby during the Christmas weekend and stole $4,000 in blank cheques.

The cheques, destined for use by defence department for army and air force payrolls could have been forged and cashed.
