BOXING AT THE 'Y' HUT

The first of what is proposed to be a series of boxing matches was held at the "Y" Hut on Thursday evening.

Most of the boys were not in training, and slowed up noticeably after the first round or so, but in spite of that, some very good fights were dished up.

In the first bout, Paul Miller's game 156 pounds were not heavy enough for Bill Chief's 175, and the decision went to the Chief.

One of the most popular bouts was between two lightweights, Bert Pownall and "Yorkie" Creswell. In this case the fight went the three full rounds, and the decision to Pownall.

The next three-rounder was a proof of condition, where T. Dents at 126 pounds was able to take a decision over Sgt. Fred Holland, who had been out of training for some time.

In the "heavy" class, Frank Sciaini and Art Smith mixed it well and freely, and were going great guns when Sciaini injured a thumb that he had already put out of joint in the afternoon. So they called it a draw at the end of the second round.

Two of the best bouts of the evening were the last two, when Red McLean, 135, lost by a slight margin to George Clyburn, 130, and Orman at 132 battled to a draw with Shaw at 135.

Both these fights went three rounds, and the boys did some clean fast battling in every round. There were far fewer clinches and much more smart punching and footwork than in the preceding bouts, and each round was given a big hand by the crowd.

As there was no big purse to battle for the boys went into it for the sportsmanship, glory, good clean fun or what have you, and every round showed that — good clean fun and swell sportsmanship.

Carleton Clay, "Y" Hut supervisor, played host to the affair and thanked all those who made the bouts possible, especially Sgts. Grosso and Sciaini, who had done so much to promote the meet.

Seven bouts made up the evening's card, and it is hoped than an equally enjoyable one will be presented next Thursday.
