The bidding:

6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♣

Successful highway robbery must be predicted on great speed. On hands which cannot be made by honest means, if crime is to pay, the defence must be caught flatfooted.

The bidding of today's hand can hardly be characterized as ultra - scientific, yet I would not take violent issue with it. This is the kind of hand that does not lend itself very well to delicate treatment and blasting methods are quite apt to prove more effective.

A club was opened against the six spade contract and ruffed by declarer. Apparently two diamond tricks must be lost unless one of the defenders holds the king-queen of diamonds alone. If, however, one of the defenders has the king and another diamond, the defence must be given a chance to slip. Declarer immediately led a low diamond to the ace, before East was aware of what was going on. It was perhaps too early for him to realize that he must unblock with the king. The adverse trump was pulled and then followed the ace, king and ten of hearts, which was ruffed in the closed hand.

East was then put in with a diamond lead and found himself in a helpless position. He had the choice of leading either a club or a heart which permitted declarer to ruff in dummy and discard the losing diamond from his own hand.

It will be seen that, if declarer had first stripped the hand, East would have had time to collect his wits and might have been alerted to the danger of being thrown in. It would then have become quite clear that possession of the king of diamonds would be a millstone around his neck and the necessity for tossing it under the ace would have been apparent. But to have foreseen the trap at trick two would have required greater acumen than East was able to demonstrate.
