SPORT CHAT

You've got to hand it to a laddie such as tough Phil Milligan of Oldham, a British bantamweight punch-tosser who trains in the hours he manages to get away from his job as a gunner in the Royal Artillery. He has to walk 10 miles every day—five miles each way—to test his weight because he's stationed somewhere in England and the nearest scales are five miles from his camp. After an absence of nearly 20 years Augie Ratner is appearing again in London rings. He's stationed in England with the American Army. A famous middleweight in the years immediately after the last war he won the Allied Services Championship at the Albert Hall. Referee for Ratner's initial appearance—or re-appearance to be more correct—was Lieut. H. G. Stribling, brother of the late Young Stribling. The bout was a three-round exhibition with Freddie Mills, lightheavyweight champ.

Everybody knows how big a public favorite Gordon Richards, the champion jockey, has become. But few realize he is even more popular with his brother riders. They pay unstinted tribute to his sterling qualities and like him for the quiet modesty with which he has worn the jockey's crown for so many years. Richards is not a stylist but he has an exquisite sense of balance, grit and tremendous strength in his hand. Racing folk who remember Fred Archer, the great saddle idol of the '80s say it is unfair to contrast him with Richards. For one thing they belong to different generations and the conditions of riding are different. For a jockey Archer was tall, five feet 8½ inches, with a figure emaciated by Turkish baths and starvation to keep his weight down. Richards, short and sturdy, has no worries.

Lemons are a thing of the past in Britain so football players just don't get a chance to suck them during half-time. The result is the local food committees in some spots have granted licences to serve tea to players during the half-time interval. The licence is necessary because of rationing restrictions. It took the war to bring about a mingling of amateur and professionals in rugby football and rowing. Now "mixed" sculling has come about. Footballs are getting hard to come by. Swansea Town couldn't find a ball for a match between the Welsh National side and the R. A. F. and the Football Association had to help Swansea out of its difficulty.

OLD MARK STANDS UP

1905 Ball Record That Still Is Unexcelled

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 14 (AP) — "Strike three 'n you're out."

Those words went rolling over the baseball park for the 19th time against Portland batters that day, JJuly 8, 1905, and a minor league record—19 strikeouts by one pitcher in nine innings—was firmly established for the simple reason that it has never been broken.

Charlie Shields, now a 61-year old elevator operator, the chunky, sandy-haired little Scotsman who pitched that record game, is an interesting character—for Charlie is an individualist, and rugged. He set his pitching record while playing for Seattle in the Pacific Coast League. He entered baseball in 1897 and retired in Memphis in 1914.
