BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

It never pays to admit defeat part way through a hand, no matter how hopeless the situation may seem. Playing every hand out at least gives you the chance that an opponent may revoke or commit some kind of horrible error which gives you your contract.

In today's deal Mr. Champion ran into a heart-breaking piece of bad luck when he found all four of the outstanding trumps bunched in one opponent's hand.

Mr. Champion

A lesser player might not have been able to cope with this misfortune but Mr. Champion brought his contract home with ease.

The opening lead was the king of spades and it won. On came the queen of diamonds and finessed it. The king was right, but Miss Brash showed out, discarding a low club.

Now, with one trick already lost and a sure loser in hearts, it was clear that Mr. Abel must be prevented from winning a trick in the trump suit. But since he had started with three guards for his king, how could that be accomplished?

Mr. Champion realized it could be done if the distribution in the other suits was just right so that Mr. Abel could not ruff prematurely.

After winning with the queen of diamonds at trick three, he led a low diamond and finessed dummy's eight spot. Next he led dummy's last spade and ruffed it. He then cashed three club tricks and followed with the ace, the king, and a third round of hearts. Miss Brash won the third heart, at which time everybody was down to two cards.

Mr. Champion had the jack and ten of diamonds. Mr. Abel was holding on to king - seven in diamonds and the remaining cards in dummy were the ace of diamonds and the eight of hearts.

At the 12th trick Miss Brash returned a spade and Mr. Champion ruffed with the ten of trumps. Mr. Abel's "sure" trump winner disappeared. If he played his low trump the heart would be discarded from the board and dummy's ace of diamonds would win the last trick. If he ruffed with the king of diamonds, dummy would overruff with the ace and the jack in the closed hand would take the last trick.

COMPOSER'S WORKS

BERGEN, Norway (AP) — A search in libraries at Oslo, Copenhagen and Leipzig, Germany, has turned up new letters and compositions by Edvard Grieg. They will be published next year by musicologist Dag Schjelderup-Ebbe.

TIME AND PLACE

struck me when reading this, was that my two prospector chums had camped in one of these historic Russian huts. What puzzled me though, was, how come the Russians had used lime and cement made in San Francisco to build the stone hut? Well there could have been a little international sharp practice or skulduggery at the time of the award, but it has done no harm. One place I remember I'm glad they got anyway was that awful Cape Fox. A grand place to stay away from during a southeaster. By our being a little slow, or perhaps not having enough good brains representing us at the award, we may have a little piece of the Alaska Panhandle, but we have been fortunate in other ways.

It was fortunate that Seward was able to persuade the U.S. Government to dig up the $7,000,000 and buy Alaska from the Russians. Seven millions seems like peanuts these days, but at that period of time it was a lot of money, and incidentally Seward came in for a lot of abuse for his actions. He was accused of throwing away seven millions for a pile of rocks. Today we are so fortunate to have the Yanks as our Northern Neighbors as well as on the south. It would be just awful to have old Khrushchev clowning it on the Alaska boundary.
