Sport Chat

The world's best flyweight boxer—as recognized by the United States and Britain—fought as Sergeant Paterson at London's Royal Albert Hall in London for a "purse" of $8, and hammered out a convincing victory. Glasgow's Jackie Paterson wasn't defending his title. He was representing the Royal Air Force against the Army in a match for services charity and received a bronze plaque as his purse. Jackie took leave from his air force physical training duties for the bout and the trip cost him nearly $100. Although the champion won, he was on the losing side. The army captured the tournament, featuring six well-known professionals and 16 outstanding amateurs, by eight bouts to three. Jackie was in a "killer" mood against L. Bdr. Jim Hayes, Leeds professional featherweight, throughout the three rounds and twice slipped to the flor through sheer exuberance of attack. A flurry of hammer blows in the first round sent Hayes to the canvas with a bloody nose but the Leeds lad recovered to last out the fight, although no match for the fast-stepping titlist. Most promising boxer to appear before the crowded house was A. C. Ronnie Bissell, 19-year-old kid who took a technical knockout in the third round from L. Cpl. Joe Thomas, tough-looking warrior who holds the Army bantam title. Bissell, a peacetime bricklayer, dropped Thomas twice in the third round. Bdr. Alf. Brown travelled 600 miles from a lonely gun-site to pound out a verdict over Sgt. Tom Reddington of the R.A.F. Brown, former amateur Boxing Association champion, was making his professional debut. Although professionals were not matched against amateurs, it was the first time in many years that they mixed together on the same card. Cmdr. G. V. (Rocky) Knight of the Royal Navy set a new style in referees. He sat in a chair outside the ring and used a small megaphone to address the boxers. All contestants fought under amateur rules.

Over on the other side of town, Sgt. Harry Hurst of Montreal scored a technical kayo over Laurie Buxton of Watford when a referee stopped a scheduled eight-round welterweight bout in the fourth at the Queensberry Club. Giving his best display since arriving in Britain with the Royal Canadian Air Force several months ago, Hurst showed skill and powerful punching. He had floored Buxton with a right hook to the chin and was belaboring him after he rose when the official stepped between them. A few nights previously, at Liverpool, Hurst lost a 10-round decision to Liverpudlian Jimmy Molloy.

On the same card, an uproar that took several minutes to calm followed the disqualification of Welsh Flyweight Champion Norman Lewis in the seventh round of a title with Tommy Plowright of Nottingham. Lewis was ahead on points but he had been cautioned three times for holding.

Henry Armstrong was awarded the Edward J. Neil Memorial Trophy, three years ago today, for his contribution to boxing as well as winning. Armstrong was the only ringman in fistic history to hold three titles simultaneously.

BRITISH ENGINEERS RIDE THE VOLTURNO ARMY

British army engineers move across the Volturno river near Castello Volturno on a short-landing deck craft, which they built. They use the ferry to move reinforcements of men, vehicles, ammunition and food across the river where the Fifth Army smashed the German defence line.
