HOW CAN I ? ? ?

By ANNE ASHLEY

Q. How can I make a skin tonic?

A. Mix ½ pt. alcohol, 2 oz. spirits of camphor, 2 oz. spirits of ammonia, 5 oz. sea salt. Add enough boiling water to make 1 qut. Put in a bottle and shake until the salt is dissolved. Always shake well before using. Rub with this tonic after the bath. It is also very soothing for tired nerves.

Q. How can I keep a layer of cake fresh after it has been cut?

A. Try taking two slices of bread and sticking them against the freshly cut surface of the cake by means of toothpicks.

Q. How can I remove scratches from furniture?

A. Rub sweet oil into the scratches, using the finger tips. Then polish with a soft cloth.

TWO-HEART TROUBLE

BRISBANE, Australia, (AP) — A Queensland soldier in Tarakan, Borneo, has been admitted to hospital with a minor leg trouble and a heart affection. Not satisfied with his heart action, a medical officer ordered an x-ray which disclosed two hearts beating alternately. A Brisbane specialist says the man will probably live to a ripe old age.

Quad Mother Coming Soon

Hopes of English Nora Carpenter Raised by Suit For Divorce

HEANOR, Eng., (AP)— Three little pink-cheeked youngsters; surviving trio of quadruplets whose birth here almost two years ago was heralded throughout the world, are today among America's latest potential citizens. And they are good specimens.

They will have no difficulty passing quarantine as they approach the Statue of Liberty, if health has anything to do with it. They have never been ill, except for slight colds, and have not needed the doctor for 12 months now.

Madeline, Maureen and Michael are the children of Nora Carpenter and William H. Thompson, war veteran and commercial printer of Pittsburgh, whose wife's suit for divorce eventually will leave him free to marry and make a normal home for the youngsters.

In the meantime—here in this picture postcard Derbyshire town—Nora Carpenter goes on with the motherly care that has kept Madeline, Maureen and Michael in perfect health during the first two years of their lives There is no special regimen for them—nothing more than the ordinary care that any conscientious mother, handicapped though she may be by British austerity, would give her youngsters.

The children did get off to a good start in a local nursing home for three months after their birth. McDonald the fourth of the quads, died at the end of two weeks—not an unusual occurrence in multiple births. But Madeline, Maureen and Michael lived on glucose, then diluted cow's milk for a month, when they were put on undiluted milk and then were given a proprietory milk formula. They were weaned at the end of seven months and took to eating vegetable soup, with the milk diet continued in supplementary form.

From the start they had vitamin K, then vitamin B-1 and later vitamin D. From weights of three pounds, eight ounces at birth, the babies increased to 22 pounds, nine ounces at the age of 18 months.

Living In Modest Home

If you visited them you would find the babies in the modest sitting room of the Carpenter home, behind an unoccupied store on the slope of the Derby road as it enters this peaceful town of 21,000 inhabitants.

Romping over a frayed divan, before a coal stove set in the recess of the fireplace, Michael takes the lead. He is after "Took" the black tomcat. He tires of the pet and Madeline, then Maureen, in childish imitation, start annoying the animal. "Took" doesn't mind having his tail pulled, but manages to disengage himself and walk away.

Leaning against the hearth fender, Nora dreams of the day when she will be boarding one of the GI nursery ships to go to New York and then to Pittsburgh. A frail, quiet and timid girl, she offers only a shy smile when a remark helps her to visualize a normal home with the father of her children in America.

"It will give her a chance to settle down and be comfortable," Nora's mother puts in.

It is time to scrub Madeline, Maureen and Michael, and Nora corrals them in an adjoining room for their daily baths.

Local Waterfront Dispute Being Conciliated — Settling Cow Bay Question at Long Last

Conciliation proceedings started in Vancouver this week in connection with the dispute between the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, on the one hand, and the Canadian Fish & Cold Storage Co. and Atlin Fisheries, on the other, over the closed shop clause in a proposed new agreement. Sittings are being held under the chairmanship of William Fraser, who was named conciliator by the provincial Department of Labor. On Wednesday hearing of the arguments in the case of the Cold Storage took place, with Norman Hyland representing the B.C. Packers, while on Friday the hearing in connection with Atlin Fisheries was held with George Clarke as representative for the company. The workers are being represented by Alex Gordon and William Rigby.

If the 1946 city council, as it appears likely, can finally settle the question of security of tenure for industries which may locate in Cow Bay it will have accomplished something which for upwards of 30 years has been a problem in Prince Rupert. The various aspects of the Cow Bay question have provided a bone of contention since the very earliest days here and have engaged the attention of all local bodies and even, at times, the courts, the most priminent incident having been the sequel of the action of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Co. back around 1911 when it filled in the mouth of the bay and had to dig it out again. At various times in the checkered history of the affairs of the bay, officially known as "Cameron's Cove," it was envisioned as the site of important industries. At one time it developed into an unsightly dumping ground for derelict and sunken craft, being finally cleaned up at the edict of City Commissioner W. J. Alder. Now, if the subdivision plan of the city goes through, it should become a settled industrial area and a permanent asset to the local waterfront. It will give the boatbuilding establishments now established there the opportunity to establish themselves on a stable basis and provide themselves with permanent plant and equipment. Other small industries may also be able to find sites in the conveniently and centrally located area.

Union steamer Cardena, Capt. Alex McLennan, arrived in port at 4 o'clock this morning from Vancouver and waypoints, sailing at 8 a.m. on her return south.

PAYS ADMIRAL'S WAY

SYDNEY, Australia, (AP) — A young airman in a queue outside a theatre in Sydney chummed up with the man next to him and paid for his ticket. When he discovered that his guest was Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser, he promptly "put the hard word on him" to help him to get into the British Fleet Air Arm.
