CHIVALRY NOT DEAD

But C. W. A. C. are Playing Prominent Part in War

Chivalry is not dead. But you'd better consider it so, mister, next time you see a khaki-clad miss with her head buried under the hood of an Army truck or jeep as she adjusts that faulty distributor, or as she changes a "flat" at the roadside. She's been trained to do those things as well as—or better—than—you have.

For that girl is a member of the Canadian Women's Army Corps, and she has been well trained. It's ten-to-one she'd refuse your gallant gesture of aid and tell you, with undisguised pride, that she's "quite capable, thank you."

Today, in what was once a man's world, the allegedly weaker sex are doing men's work. This is necessary for victory.

In the Signals, at one time it was strange to see a girl seated at a wireless set, headphone strapped on expertly taking down a message. Today that's commonplace. That pretty "soldierettee" has been trained by experts of telegraphy, and now she's doing the job as well as any many, and it has been observed that girls take a keener interest in this work.

It is a public misconception, after seeing how smart the girls of the C.W.A.C. appear together in a parade, that they work together as a unit.

Only a small group of C.W.A.C. personnel work as a unit. That is the admiinstrative staff of the C.W.A.C. company to which a girl is attached, although she may be posted to any Army unit for duty.

For example, there are the girls posted to the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals as wireless or teletype operators, cipher clerks, drivers, general duties and stores clerks. They are actually doing the work which, at one time, was being done by men who are fighting today in Normandy or Italy.

Rare is the branch of the Army which does not boast C.W.A.C. personnel. Royal Canadian Artillery, Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps, Royal Canadian Army Service Corps, Royal Canadian Medical Corps, Canadian Dental Corps—all point with pride to their ladies in khaki.

Traditionally feminine lines of endeavour are not neglected when it comes to C.W.A.C. postings. Lucky indeed are those soldiers for whom food is prepared by a C.W.A.C. cook under supervision of a C.W.A.C. dietitian. It definitely has that "certain something" that a man finds so hard to equal.

Every girl soldier is on active service. Provided she has the qualifications, she can be sent anywhere in the world. There is but one Army for Canada's women.

Advantages of belonging to the C.W.A.C. are varied. It is an education in itself. Each girl who has enlisted has seen new horizons. Friendships are formed which will not cease when the war ends. These girls know that they are part of a great people, a great nation and a great Empire.

The most important point of all, though, is knowing that they are "doing their bit" when Canada most needs them.

To have been in the corps will be a distinction which other women will envy and which those who have enlisted will prize.

Beryl Herbert of this city has received an interesting souvenir of the invasion of France from her brother, Pte. Morris Herbert, note of the Free French government in the form of a new franc note. Pte. Herbert is now fighting in Normandy with the Regina Rifles. He joined up with the old 102nd Battery here back in 1940 and has been overseas for nearly three years. The franc note is printed on ordinary paper and measures two by three inches. There is the denomination certification on the front and a tricolor flag centre on the back.
