3 ♠	Pass	3 ♣	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♦

In the play of the hand it pays declarer to take a few seconds time out at the opening lead to ask himself the simple question, "I wonder what the lead is from?" The answer to this question will simplify the play of a great many hands which might otherwise go down to defeat.

South was declarer at a contract of four hearts. The bidding was orthodox enough, though perhaps North would have been better advised to bid three no trump over three clubs instead of giving a heart preference. The taking of nine tricks would have proven to be routine.

Against the heart contract West led the five of diamonds. The queen was played from dummy reflexly and was taken by the ace. A trump was returned. Declarer gave up any hope of ruffing a club in dummy because he realized that when he surrendered a trick in that suit another trump would come back. He rested all his hopes on the chance that the spades would break. Trumps were extracted and then the ace, king, and another spade brought forth the bad news that he was down one.

Had declarer paused at trick one to ask himself, "I wonder what West is leading from?" he might have made the hand in a very simple manner. Against a four heart contract, on bidding of this type, it is unlikely that West would have underled the ace. That card is, therefore, virtually marked in East's hand. There is, however, a very great likelihood that the opening lead was from the jack, in which case the play of a small diamond from dummy will establish a discard for one of South's losing clubs. The odds greatly favored that play. The prospect for an even break of the adverse spades were distinctly less than 50-50.

Boat drill

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Hamilton, department of transport officer in charge of small boat regulations, said Tuesday the federal government's plan for licensing of small boat operators is designed to encourage boaters to educate themselves. He said thousands of people now go out in small boats without even elementary boating knowledge.

PEACE AIM

MONTREAL (CP)—Mrs. Therese Casgrain, chairman of the Quebec Voice of Women, says slander, suspicion and labelling of the nuclear disarmament group is inevitable and members must find the courage to face this and fight for peace. She told a meeting of the group: "It is no use just being against something—we must be for something."
