Christianity is Standing Tests In all Respects

Frank Ball Morning Speaker at First United Church; Capt. Rev. Joblin Evening Speaker

Frank Ball told First United Church congregation Sunday morning that the best proof of Christianity is that it stands the test, does not need to be taken for granted, it cannot be learned by hearsay, and it must be experienced.

Mr. Ball, theological student of Union College, is taking morning services at First United in the absence of Rev. J. A. Donnell, now on vacation.

The speaker decried the practice of believing in hearsay and referred to the modern tendency to let other people do one's thinking. In religion, he emphasized this is particularly dangerous.

"We should not accept unchallengingly creedal belief," he asserted. "Christianity can and does stand on its ability to be experienced. But ach must find it out for himself.

In the evening the service was taken by Captain the Rev. Joblin, by permission of the senior chaplain. Captain Joblin said the knowledge that God had willed that there should be a world community and the fact that "we are taking part even now in steps towards the fulfilment of that plan" should cause a thrill to all.

There were many differences among peoples he noted, but there were many common grounds of agreement. There is a sufficient community of interests to bind the whole world together. This was the work of Christianity, he maintained. In the home there was a community of interests. In the city there was a wider community of interests and in the country a still wider community of interests. Christianity transcended the limits of a country and its fulfilment would provide that community of interests that would make "Thy Kingdom come upon earth as it is in Heaven."

The soloist for the evening was Steven Bond.

LANDOWNER DIES

TOWCESTER, Northants (AP) — Lord Hesketh, prominent estate owner in Northamptonshire and North Buckinghamshire, died here at the age of 62 shortly after attending a county council meeting. He was director of the county fire office and owned a brewery, a cinema and a race-course.

MOVIE FIERCE INDICTMENT OF NAZI REGIME

A gripping story of life under Nazi rule is unfolded in the Monogram drama, "Women in Bondage," showing Wednesday only at the Capitol Theatre. It exposes conditions which have been little realized by the outside world, and gives a sordid picture of home life under the Hitler regime.

Gail Patrick and Nancy Kelly are co-starred in this startling film. Miss Patrick is seen as a German woman who returns home during the war, after several years' absence, and is horrified at the degraded status which has been enforced on the women of her native land. Miss Kelly is a native girl who is arbitrarily prevented from marrying her soldier sweetheart, and who commits a cardinal sin when she cries out against the regime. The eventual punishment of both women furnishes the ultimate in brutality.

The picture is strong fare, but reveals facts about the ruthless Nazi government which should be known by the outside world. Pagan baptism, mercy killings, sterilization, government-encouraged vice and the cruelties of the Gestapo are only a few of the subjects dealt with in the highly dramatic story.
