Boilermakers' Card—

WALLACE WINS BY TECHNICAL KAYO ROUTE

Bill Porayko Quickly Subdued in Main Event Last Night

Private Wellman Wallace, 164-pound Acropolis fistic sharpshooter, qualified for another notch on his musket when he scored a technical knockout over Bill Porayko in a brief encounter which was the feature bout of the Boilermakers' Athletic Club boxing card in the staff house dining hall last night.

Towels and seconds began to pile into the ring from Porayko's corner after less than 30 seconds of the second round after the 168-pound Boilermakers' fighter had held his face a fleet second too long in the orbit of Wallace's tank-busting right. The blow, which Porayko had already sampled in the first round, put him out on his feet.

After 80 seconds of the first round Wallace sent over his first right to Porayko's jaw. It was a masterpiece of timing and solid delivery which jolted not only Porayko but the fans as well. Both had, apparently, been fascinated by the manoeuvres of Wallace's left, which seemed to be opening the way for a body blow.

The bell saved Porayko in the initial round and he had not recovered when he went in for the second round.

Wallace's final right sent Porayko to the canvas and he arose, clinging to the ropes, when the seconds cried halt.

The fight had been scheduled for five two-minute rounds.

In the semi-windup, Lloyd Shier of B.A.C. and Al La Rose, Canadian Army, both in the 140 pound class, waltzed four rounds to a draw. Neither showed much hitting ability. Shier carried the initiative throughout the fight but failed to take decisive advantage of it.

Percy Welter, 136-pounder, showed indications of genuine quality when he won a decision in three rounds from Harry Williams, 135 pounds, in the first of the decision fights. Welter made good use of his left hand in the second round, and exploited it even more fully in the third. Williams, who relied on a bouncing style of footwork, was effectively parried when he took the initiative.

The young contestants of the four earlier non-decision bouts shed credit on the work being done out at the Boilermakers' gymn among the younger boys. The youngsters take their fighting seriously and some of the boys who have been in the ring before showed definite improvement in technique which reflects creditably on both the boys and their instructors.

Featured in the non-decision fights were: Jim McDougal, 118 vs. Al McFadden, 115; Barry Wilson, 110, vs. Dave Smith, 100; Jerry Perreault, 118, vs. Gordin Shier, 116; Jordan Smith, 90, vs. Mondred Olsen, 90; Norman Sather, 110, vs. George Marshall, 110.

Two scheduled bouts failed to materialize after the contestant of one fractured his thumb in training, and another failed to show up.

There were two battle-royals involving young fighters, during the show.

Gymnastic Show Pleasing To Fight Audience

Not since the old Pro-Rec days has gymnastics received much recognition in Prince Rupert but, happily, the difficult art is undergoing a revival.

Leading off last night's Boilermakers' boxing card at the staff house dining hall was a gymnastic display presented by eight boys under George Ferguson and Johnny Collingwood which caught the fancy of the fans because it was well down and unusual.

The display of pyramid building and tumbling was brief but it was also filled with the promise of what may be expected of the gymnasts given more time for training. At the conclusion of the display Boilermakers' President George Stanton revealed to the fans that the participants had been training only two months.

Leader of the exercises was George Ferguson, the instructor, who finished off with a series of difficult tumbling routines.

ATHLETIC CLUB GRATEFUL FOR ASSISTANCE

Recognition of the assistance given the Boilermakers' Athletic Club by local service clubs and other organizations was expressed by Boilermakers' President George Stanton before the audience at last night's boxing card.

"We need help to keep the gymnasium operating and I thank the service clubs and others who have given us financial assistance. This work is helping to keep the youngsters off the streets and is giving them valuable athletic experience."

Mr. Stanton particularly thanked the local Gyro club which contributed boxing gloves for the fights and which was represented by W. D. Lambie.

OFFICER HAD BRIGHT IDEA

Tank-Hunting Expedition in Which "Smoky" Smith Won V.C. Was Bell-Irving's Conception

VANCOUVER, Dec. 27 (CP) — A letter received here reveals that the tank-hunting expedition in which Private Ernest (Smoky) Smith of New Westminster won the Victoria Cross was the result of an idea conceived and put into operation by Lieut. Col. Henry Bell-Irving, D.S.O. of Vancouver. The letter was written by Armorer Sergeant Bob Hewell of Winnipeg who said praise for the tank-hunting expedition has originated from all quarters as high as Army headquarters.

Bell-Irving was with the Seaforth Highlanders of Vancouver when the action occurred in October but since has been appointed officer commanding the Loyal Edmonton Regiment.
