WAS LOCATED HERE IN WAR

Detective Alan Hoare of the Vancouver city police, who was wounded in the sensational gun battle in the railway yards of Vancouver last Wednesday afternoon, will be remembered in Prince Rupert as a naval intelligence officer during the war. He was stationed here for some time and was reported to have been instrumental in tracking down two Europeans who were later interned.

Detective Hoare was shot in the leg in the battle in Great Northern Railway yards in the course of a pursuit which resulted in the fatal shooting of Prowler Officers G. O. Ledingham and Charles Boyes and one of the bank robber suspects. Hoare is progressing favorably in hospital in Vancouver.

The former local naval officer was a crack revolver shot and often attended pistol shooting schools of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in the United States.

JASPER - PRINCE GEORGE SLEEPER

Effective March 3 a standard sleeping car will be added to Canadian National Railways' passenger trains between Jasper and Prince George, according to William Cruickshank, general agent, passenger department, Canadian National Railways, Prince Rupert. The extra equipment, which will enable the railway to provide improved service, will be used on eastbound and westbound trains. The sleeper will be set out upon arrival of trains at Jasper and Prince George and parked for occupancy until 8:00 a.m.

Herring Showing Up Again—Hunt's Inlet Pound Taken Over—Co-op In Session

Herring have shown up in several places along the north coast in the last week and Nelson Bros. cannery as well as the B. C. Packers' reduction plant at Port Edward are in operation again. That is a good sign at the present time when practically all other types of fishery are unactive although it comes too late to benefit the scores of company boats that left the north two weeks ago, discouraged by the weather.

Schools of herring have been reported in Raymond Channel, Bella Bella region, Surf Inlet and Trail Bay in Wark Canal. Throughout the Prince Rupert fishery district, only 13 boats are reported to be seining although, if the run continues good, it is probable that more may come north from Vancouver, particularly to the southern part of the district.

In addition to the above-mentioned runs, which started earlier in the week, herring showed up Friday in Thistle Passage, Larado Inlet. This is an area where big catches have been made in previous years.

At Surf Inlet the water was discolored for a few days by "red feed," a minute shrimp-like organism that appears periodically and is used as feed by various types of fish. "Red feed" has a damaging effect on the fish's stomach and greatly shortens the time which the fish will keep properly when taken out of the water. Consequently, herring which have been living on "red feed" are suitable only for reduction and not for bait. Fishermen say that salmon which have been caught after eating "red feed" will spoil overnight if the entrails are not removed.

Martin Johnson and Mike Postuk are reported to be repairing the herring pound at Hunt's Inlet which they have taken over from the McFadden brothers. While it was operated by the McFadden brothers, the pound provided thousands of pounds of live bait for halibut fishermen who headed straight for the Porcher Island Inlet when the halibut season opened. Johnson and McFadden are installing new fine mesh wire in the pound and hope to have it finished by the time the first runs of herring enter the inlet.

The annual meeting of the Prince Rupert Fishermen's Co-operative Association concluded today after a series of sessions in which the directors and officers reported their year's stewardship to the members and raised points of policy for discussion. Among the major discussions was one surrounding a proposed operating agreement between the B.C. Fishermen's Co-operative Federation and fishermen of the Prince Rupert, Vancouver, Victoria and Kyuoquot co-operatives which would co-ordinate price scales and operating conditions along the coast.

The Department of Public Works snag boat Essington, which has been at the dry dock all winter for annual overhaul, came off the pontoons this week after having her hull conditioned and will soon be ready for her summer's work. Her first job, before she starts to clean the Skeena and Naas river channels several weeks from now, will be to repair the fishermen's floats, especially in the Cow Bay area, which have got out of line during northwest gales. The derrick has put back in position the huge concrete anchors which hold the outward ends of the floats.

The government lighthouse tender Alberni, which also is getting annual overhaul at the dry dock, is due to go back in operation in the near future. In addition to engine and general overhaul, the Alberni now glistens with a new coat of paint.

A highly interesting and splendidly prepared volume is the publication by the Fisheries Research Board of Canada of a descriptive and illustrated account of the marine fishes of the British Columbia coast. This book consists of 368 pages. A complete scientific description is given of each species together with a brief account of habits, life history and distribution. Each of the 245 species is illustrated by a black and white drawing. This book, the most complete and authoritative of its kind, will be particularly useful to fishermen, fish handlers, students and teachers in coastal communities, tourists and salt-water anglers. It should also be valuable in all school and public libraries for reference purposes. Authors are W. A. Clemens and G. V. Wilby.

John Unwin Sells Place and Leaving

Robert Munro, who came to Prince Rupert from the prairies during the war and has been employed by the Atlin Fisheries here, has purchased the property of John E. Unwin, Moresby Avenue, Westview, and has taken up residence on the place. Mr. Unwin leaves tonight on the Camosun for Vancouver to take up future residence in Vancouver. He is one of Prince Rupert's real pioneer citizens and a veteran of World War I.
