HELICOPTER SERVICE, LONDON TO PARIS—A helicopter took off from the roof of a London, Eng., building for a flight to Paris recently. This new service is designed to relieve U.K. air passengers of terminal transportation problems which occur on normal flights. Passengers travelling by the helicopter service will be able to drive almost up to the roof air strip, board the aircraft, and two-and-a-half hours later find themselves in the heart of the French capital. Here crowds watch the helicopter as it leaves on its London-to-Paris hop.

Modern Etiquette
By ROBERTA LEE

Q. If in restaurant with guests, how can the host who thinks he has been considerably overcharged on the bill presented, adjust the matter without embarrassment to his guests or to himself?

A. He can quietly excuse himself and consult the headwaiter.

Q. When a young man escorts a woman home, should he ask for her key and unlock the door, or should she do this after he has left?

A. It is courteous for the man to unlock the door and to see that the woman is safely inside the house before he departs.

Q. Would it be appropriate to have a buffet luncheon following an afternoon wedding?

A. Yes, allwoing the guests to serve themselves.
