SNOW WHITENS CITY STREETS

Snow flurries whitened the city landscape overnight as winter made a last-ditch, half-hearted onslaught in the face of approaching spring. The earth, still chilled from winter's prolonged reign, retained the quarter-inch snow blanket well into the morning.

Temperatures, which hovered in the low thirties Tuesday, climbed during the night, dropped again early this morning as the snow fell.

Rain and light snow during the last week have blunted the edge of enthusiasm displayed by gardeners who earlier in the month had begun to turn the sodden earth in anticipation of an early spring.
