COUNCIL BRIEFS

City supports brief on coast guard plan

City Council last night went on record as wholeheartedly supporting a brief presented by Angus H. Johnston of Vancouver calling for the establishment of a Canadian Coast Guard service.

Mr. Johnston wrote council earlier in the month stating he was presenting a brief to the federal government urging a "completely integrated Canadian Coast Guard service."

In his letter Mr. Johnston said that the brief had already been endorsed by the City of Vancouver, City of New Westminster, Burnaby and Richmond.

Mayor P. J. Lester appointed Alderman A. Donald Ritchie and Alderman Norman Bellis to act with him as a Court of Revision for the Civic Voters' list at a sitting set for November 1.

City Works Superintendent C. J. Gustafson told council that he had asked Associated Engineering Services Ltd., to request the contractors installing the new sewer system to clean up areas where sewers had been placed, as soon as possible.

He was replying to a query from Ald. T. Norton Youngs asking what had been done in this respect as the project often inconvenienced property owners and householders in areas where sewers had been installed.

Council approved a motion by Alderman Youngs that the city apply to Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation asking that Associated Engineering Services Ltd. make a study of the urban area of Prince Rupert under the National Housing Act which states that CMHC may "with the approval of a province or municipality conduct special studies relating to the condition of urban areas, to means of improving housing, to the need for additional housing or for urban redevelopment."

A request from the St. John Ambulance association for the installation of a "No Parking" sign in front of the Civil Defence building on Fulton Street was referred to the police committee.

Referred to the zonging committee was a request from Mrs. Patrick Mazzei for rezoning of lots 23 and 24, Block 24, Section 1, from commercial to light industrial use.

A request from Rev. Dr. R. W. K. Elliott, pastor of First United Church asking that a member of City Council be appointed to the board to administer the newly - dedicated Friendship House on Fraser Street was referred to the finance committee.

Sponsoring committee of Air Cadet Squadron 559 was granted permission to hold a tag day on April 17, 1960.

Fire Chief Earl W. Becker was delegated to attend a course for local assistant fire marshals to be held in Vancouver October 15 and 16.

Approval was given a board of works committee recommendation that a load limit of 15 tons be placed on Wantage Road between the junction of Eleventh Avenue East and the Canadian National Telegraphs repeater station.

Permission was granted Fulton Street Market Ltd., to build stairs up to the Fulton Street level according to plans and specifications laid down by the city engineering department.

A police committee recommendation that the "No Parking" sign in front of the Capitol Theatre be changed to permit parking during the afternoon and on week days when the theatre is closed, was approved by council.

The following trade licences have been approved by the licencing committee and city council:

Oscar Johnson and John A. May, 1074 Seventh Avenue East, plumbing and heating contractors; Sunrise Industries Ltd., Parkside Motel, agent for powdered milk and mixing machine; Thomas E. Thomas, 700 block Second Avenue West, taxi-operator; Gunter Henning, 1609 Eighth Avenue West, servicing machines and equipment; Gordon D. Ronson, 817 Fraser Street, handy man service; Mogens Wienrich, 339 McBride Street, retail furniture, china and glass; Roy Powell, peddler, marine supplies and servicing machines and equipment; Guillaume Lindelauf, Miller Cigar store, retail tobacco, magazines and confectionery; William Kyle, 958 Sixth Avenue East, renting one three-room suite.

There are 11 main blood groups among cattle and many more sub-groups.

NEWLYWEDS . . . Glenn Ford and Debbie Reynolds co-star for the first time as the young newlyweds of MGM's romantic comedy, "It Started With a Kiss." Filmed in CinemaScope and color largely on locations in Spain, the picture concerns a GI whose life is hilariously complicated when he wins both a showgirl bride and a spectacular automobile of the future.

Film queen of 1960s sex kitten with brains

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Here's a preview of the movie queen for the 1960s:

She is beautiful, but not in a ravishing, unattainable way. She has the brains to discuss world politics or space travel.

Her proportions are not outsized, nor is her allure a blatant one. She has an inner reserve of passion that is apparent to men of all ages, yet is not so obvious as to offend women.

Briefly, she's a sex kitten with brains.

Each decade of Hollywood history has been marked by distinct types of stars.

The flapper dominated the roaring '20s. Leaders were Clara Bow, the "It" girl, and Joan Crawford of "Our Dancing Daughters."

The sophisticate followed in the '30s, in the dillusioned, depression-ridden world. This was the heyday of the woman of the world, as played by Greta Garbo, Norma Shearer, Bette Davis, Claudette Colbert, Irene Dunne, Rosalind Russell, Katharine Hepburn and the adaptable Miss Crawford.

OBVIOUS PINUPS

The pinup girl was the demand of the wartime and postwar '40s, which sought fast entertainment and stars whose sex appeal was obvious. Betty Grable adorned every barracks wall, and she ruled the decade with Rita Hayworth, Esther Williams, Dorothy Lamour, Lana Turner, Ann Sheridan and other well-equipped beauties.

The ideal girl of the '50s was a reaction to the previous decade. Most notable were Audrey Hepburn, who had the figure of a boy, and the cool Philadelphia heiress, Grace Kelly. They were definitely not sexless, but their appeal was ladylike, as was that of Deborah Kerr, Eva Marie Saint and Joanne Woodward.

Marilyn Monroe was the anachronism of the '50s, a throwback to the wartime pinup girl. Indeed, she first found fame as the foxhole sweetheart of the Korean War.

How can we tell what the 1960s will bring? We can't, of course. But we can try to foretell the temper of the spaceage times.

The coming decade shapes up as the thinking man's era. But all thinking and no play will make life dull for even the thinking man. He' want a girl who is as appealing outdoors as in.

Hollywood is ready for him. The new movie girl can probably play a smashing set of tennis and swim like an otter. But she also looks cute and cuddly in a sports car parked on a lonely road.

Here are some prime candidates for top stardom:

Lee Remick—Brimming with appeal . . . compact, blonde, can act, a graduate of little theatres, TV, actor's studio . . . scored a hit in Anatomy of a Murder in role intended for Lana Turner.

Angie Dickinson—Long-stemmed lovely with throaty voice . . . legs and voice made good impression in Rio Bravo.

Millie Perkins—Beauty chosen from thousands to play Anna Frank . . . former cover girl with deep, offbeat personality . . . problem: Breaking out of type as martyred Jewish girl.

Sandra Dee—at 17, she's the ideal of the teen-age set . . . honey-haired and cute as a button.

Hope Lange — Green - eyed daughter of a musician and actress . . . on Broad at 12 . . . discovered in Bus Stop, scored in Peyton Place.

Stella Stevens — Platinum blonde aptly case as Appassionata von Climax in Li'l Abner . . . at 20, she's divorced, mother of a four-year-old boy.

Tuesday Weld—Another model and amazingly developed at 15 . . . Age hasn't hindered her career, as she can play much older roles.

Jill St. John—With i.q. of 162, she graduated from high school at 14, was discovered acting at college . . . divorced and 18, she is engaged to heir Lance Reventlow.

Carol Lynley—sweet-faced girl of 17, she played pregnant teenager of Blue Denim on stage and screen.

Luana Patten — starred as youngster in Disney films . . . now an attractive 20 and scoring as a grown-up actress.

JAPANESE MARGARINE

Japan's 1959 production of margarine and shortening was expected to reach a record of more than 80,000 tons.

Building permit granted after council hears appeal

Gerald E. Sherman, manager of the Savoy Hotel last night won an appeal against a ruling of City Building Inspector J. C. Ewart which had prevented him making renovations to property adjacent to the hotel.

Appearing before Council on behalf of the hotel owners, Mr. Sherman said that Mr. Ewart had refused to grant contractor R. C. Mutch a building permit to carry out renovations to three buildings unless regulations of the National Building Code were followed.

Mr. Sherman said that he only wished to make the buildings serviceable for a period of two years since his firm planned an expansion program which included addition of a dining room and cocktail lounge to the Savoy Hotel.

He said that installation of cement supports or creosoted pilings as suggested by the building inspector was out of the question due to the huge expense.

Sitting as a committee of the whole after the conclusion of the agenda, council agreed that Mr. Ewart had no choice in ruling as he did if the buildings were intended to be of a permanent nature.

Mr. Ewart had pointed out the great degree of rot in a great many of the present pilings and said that if the building was to be a permanent one the structure planned by the contractor would not be safe.

However, he said, if the buildings were only going to be occupied for another two years, then the proposed renovation could be considered safe for such a length of time.

Council and Mr. Sherman agreed that if a permit was issued, the owners of the Savoy Hotel would enter into a legal agreement to tear down the buildings within the specified time.

Council approved a report of the committee of the whole that the city building inspector be instructed to issue a permit to allow the renovation on condition that the building be limited to a 2½-year occupancy and contingent to the city entering into a legal agreement with the owners of the Savoy Hotel that they tear down the buildings in 2½ years.
