BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

To signal your interest in the continuation of a suit, it is not always possible to flash a high card—that is, a card which will appear to your partner as an unnecessarily high one. Partner should take that fact into consideration when he watches your play to a trick.

The most frustrating form in which this dilemma presents itself is the case where your partner leads an ace, dummy has three small cards in the suit and your holding is king-deuce. You fervently desire continuation of the suit but if you play the deuce, partner will almost surely shift. If you play the king, that will probably set up the queen in declarer's hand.

Occasionally this problem will work itself out when partner, after a mental review of the bidding and a consideration of dummy's cards, comes to the conclusion that if you don't have the king of the suit led the contract can't be beaten anyway.

Mr. Dale

Today's hand illustrates the problem in a somewhat less rigid form. Mr. Muzzy led the king of hearts and Mr. Champion dropped the trey. Mr. Muzzy then frowned and started to think. When that happened, Mr. Champion knew he was sunk.

Mr. Muzzy proceeded to mastermind the hand as only he can do. He shifted to the nine of diamonds. Now Mr. Dale easily won eleven tricks, discarding his last two hearts on dummy's diamonds after clearing the trump suit, and losing only a heart and a club.

"Why didn't you continue hearts, Muzzy?" demanded Mr. Champion, coldly.

"Because you played the deuce," Mr. Muzzy replied angrily.

"I played the trey, not the deuce," Mr. Champion snapped.

"Well, deuce, trey, what's the difference?" Mr. Muzzy argued. "It was a small card."

While the trey was indeed a small card, it did not necessarily say to shift. Mr. Muzzy should have considered the fact that the deuce had not shown up on the first trick. It wasn't in his hand or the dummy. It was possible, of course, that Mr. Dale had it and was false-carding when he played the six. But it was just as likely that Mr. Champion was starting an echo from the holding he actually had.

Seek control of speedboats

VICTORIA (CP)—The provincial government is seeking authority for control over the use of outboard motor boats on lakes in the province, Recreation Minister Westwood told the legislature Wednesday.

He made the disclosure after some members said high-speed boats were becoming an increasing menace on the lakes.

Mr. Westwood said it was a matter of federal jurisdiction but an approach has been made to the federal department of transport which holds the authority.

Radio system to beam calls

Special to The Daily News

VANCOUVER.—Long distance telephone calls will be beamed between Prince Rupert and Vancouver by a very high frequency radio system for the first time this year.

North-west Telephone Company officials in Vancouver report that engineering is now under way on the extension of the north coast radio relay chain to Prince Rupert. This chain at present reaches as far north as Kitimat.

Route of the 640-mile radio bridge between Prince Rupert and southern B.C. will be via eleven intermediate relay stations situated on Vancouver Island, Calvert, Swindle and Trutch Islands—in the northern coastal group—and Gray Bay, on Moresby Island in the Queen Charlottes.

From Gray Bay, the radio signals carrying long haul calls will be beamed direct to the Mount Hays radio site, just outside Prince Rupert.

At present, long distance telecommunication between Prince Rupert and the rest of the province is conducted on landlines by way of Prince George.

North-west and Prince Rupert telephone officials anticipate a marked improvement and speed up in service to and from Prince Rupert following installation of the new radio link.

Quakers whip Flyers to take third place

By The Canadian Press

Saskatoon Quakers eased themselves into third place in the prairie division of the Western Hockey League Wednesday night with a 6-1 victory over Edmonton Flyers.

The result left Winnipeg Warriors in last place. The Warriors now need to beat Saskatoon twice in their remaining two games to ensure a playoff position.

New Westminster Royals already knowing they had lost any chance of reaching coast division playoffs, wilted 4-3 in an overtime game against Victoria Cougars.

In the other WHL game at Seattle, the coast - leading Totems went down 4-2 to Vancouver Canucks.

The only WHL action today is on the coast where Seattle travels to the Spokane Flyers' camp.

Vic Lynn, Ralph Keller, Milan Marcetta, Bob Kabel, Bill Burega and Paul Masnick scored for Quakers. Roger Dejordy scored the only Flyers tally to break Lucien Dechene's shutout hopes.

Starry centre Guyle Fielder set an assist record in the Seattle-Vancouver game, raising his own record mark to 90 by helping on team-mate Bill MacFarland's final period goal. He established the previous mark of 89 assists last year. Fielder also scored a goal.

Vancouver's scorers were Ray Cyr, Walt Peacosh, Ron Hutchinson and Danny Belisle.

Rookie goaltender Reno Zanier was struck by a hard shot at the start of the third period in New Westminster, cutting his chest. The game was held up five minutes.

The Royals needed him. He stopped 31 shots during the game but saw his team go down to a 4-3 overtime defeat.

Stan Baluik scored two goals for the Victoria squad, while Jim Hay and Gord Wilson scored the others. Royals' scorers were Arnie Schmautz, Pat Hannigan and Hugh Barlow.

The Cougars never fell behind, opening the scoring in the first period, closing the second with a 3-1 lead, and scoring the winner 10 seconds into overtime.

Vancouver visitor Mrs. Stewart Lee left this morning by plane for her home following a six-week visit in the city as guest of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Thornber, 512 Eighth Avenue West.
