WILL DISCUSS SKATING RINK

Kinsmen Hope to Make Improvements at Kiddies' Kamp at Lakelse

An open discussion, designed to bring out the members' reaction on whether an artificial ice rink would be a practical and worthwhile addition to the city's recreational facilities or not, will be held at the next general meeting of the Kinsmen Club. Decision to bring up the question was made at the executive meeting held in the Civic Centre last night when George Dibb pointed out that other service clubs in the city were interested in the matter and suggested that the Kinsmen Club define their policy.

A new feature for May 24 celebration will be Maypole dancing, according to President R. G. Moore who said Mrs. Gulland had agreed to instruct a group of girls for the event.

Members discussing the Kiddies Kamp at Lakelse Lake felt that accommodations could not be expanded a great deal this year but the present structures should be replaced by permanent buildings if possible. They were also of the opinion that, if a suitable arrangement could be worked out, the Kinsmen club of Terrace should be permitted to send some children to the camp during the summer while the Prince Rupert youngsters are there or after if there is time left.

MAPLE LEAFS ASSUME LEAD

Defeat Boston to Top National Hockey League Chicago 7, New York 4. Boston 2, Toronto 4.

TORONTO (?)—Toronto Maple Leafs defeated Boston Bruins by a score of 4 to 2 at the Maple Leaf Gardens here last night and went into exclusive possession of first place in the National Hockey League standing. The Detroit Red Wings, with whom the Maple Leafs had been tied, were idle last night.

Chicago Black Hawks won a free-scoring 7 to 4 victory over the New York Rangers at Madison Square Garden. The Hawks are now bidding fair to climb out of the cellar they have occupied so long, being one only game below the Montreal Canadiens now.

The week-end schedule of play is as follows:

Saturday —Detroit at Montreal, Chicago at Toronto.

Sunday — Montreal at New York, Boston at Chicago.

SIMONSON WINS LEGION TOURNEY

Defeated Neil Cameron by Close Margin Last Night

A large attendance of Legion members was present last night to witness the final match in the English billiards tournament at the Canadian Legion Hall and, although the runner-up was not seen at his best, the result of the game was in doubt until the last minute when Cameron, needing five to win, failed after making 14 which did not count, leaving R. H. Simonson an opening which he took full advantage of and ran out winner with a score of 200 to 195.

Simonson played a steady game throughout the match and, although he did not pile up any large breaks, was frequently in double figures and well deserved his win. Cameron was very erratic in his play and never thoroughly settled down to his proper form. Although he compiled a total of 423 points during the match to his opponent's 235, he made four bad mistakes when his fifteenth point seemed inevitable and these errors lost him the game. During the evening Cameron made breaks of 23, 21, 49, 25 and 40 and, on numerous occasions, had to register "no score" with 12 and 14 points to his credit.

At the conclusion of the game the prizes were presented to the players by President V. G. Houston who, in a few well chosen words congratulated both players on the hard fight that they had put up.

Jack Judge acted as referee for the match and Alex Harvey as marker.

Several names were added to the list of players taking part in the next tournament which will start next week.

GARDEN NOTEBOOK

Gardening begins with turning over the soil. This ancient practice, dating from prehistoric times, has been attacked by critics like most traditional methods in agriculture. But recent scientific tests have proved again that spading in gardens, and plowing for larger areas, are the best methods of conditioning soil for planting.

Depth of spading has long been a subject for debate. English gardeners, with the experience of centuries behind them, are strong for 'trenching" the soil two spade lengths deep. Since the standard garden spade has a blade 12 inches long this loosens the soil to a depth of two feet.

For roses, perennials, and some annual crops, private gardeners in this country often practice trenching. It is a good way to prepare a perennial bed, where the plants are to grow for several years without disturbance.

But for vegetables, and annual flowers, trenching seems to be not necessary. Turning the soil to a depth of 12 inches is sufficient. By the time you have turned over a hundred square feet on the first warm day of spring, you will be inclined to settle on that basis.

Spading, in fact, can be overdone, especially that first day. When muscles are soft after a winter's rest, they must be broken in with caution. It is important, however, that you do not skimp on the depth of spading. Drive the spade straight down, never at an angle, so that you get the full advantage of its 12-inch blade. If you want to take it easy, and it is advisable that you do, limit the area that you spade each day, rather than lessening the depth to which you dig.

One hour's work a day for eight days will turn over to spade depth 1,500 square feet, and leave its owner without even sore muscles.

Spading loosens the soil, lets air into it, and leaves it in the best condition for both water and air to enter. Spading also can be used to mix with the coarse soil materials which will improve its condition. Good soil, Ohio State experiments showed, is composed of 25 per cent "pores" containing air, 25 per cent "pores" containing water, and 50 per cent solid matter.

Heavy clay soil has particles so fine that there are not enough "pores" in it. But it can be made good by mixing one inch of fine cinders or very coarse sand, an inch of manure or a substitute such as compost or peat moss, to four inches of clayey soil. This will give an idea of the quantity of coarse material needed to loosen heavy garden soil. Spread it evenly over the garden, and try to mix it evenly with the soil, so that it will create "pores" all through it, and thus improve aeration and also water retention.
