BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Mr. Dale may miss a delicate bidding inference now and then, but he is a pretty good man on management of the trump suit. In today's deal he handled a ticklish situation in fine style.

The opening lead of the queen of spades was won on the board with the king.

The ace of trumps was laid down and then Mr. Dale entered his hand with the queen of diamonds.

For the next trump lead from the South hand there is a strong temptation to play the jack, to make sure of driving out either the king or the queen.

Mr. Dale

If the contract was to be made, this impulse had to be submerged and Mr. Dale was successful in that respect.

He made the key play at trick four—a small trump. Mr. Abel played the eight, a club was discarded from dummy and Mrs. Keen won with her lone queen.

The spade return was won with the ace in the closed hand and the jack of hearts was led, driving out the king.

The jack of spades won the third trick for the defenders, but that was all. Mr. Dale ruffed the next spade, picked up the last outstanding trump and spread the hand.

If he had led the jack of hearts on the second round of that suit, Mrs. Keen's queen would have won and then Mr. Abel would have held the king-nine over Mr. Dale's ten-six—two more sure winners.

The reasoning on the actual play of the heart suit went as follows:

If the opposing hearts were divided 3-3, there was no problem. Only two tricks would have to be lost in the suit regardless of which heart was led on the second round.

If the opposing hearts were divided 4-2, the chances of making the contract would not be too good.

The defenders would probably win three trump tricks.

However, there was one set-up within the framework of this 4-2 distribution which would offer a play for 10 tricks.

If the defender holding the two trumps had the king or queen, proper play would limit the trump losers to two.

To take advantage of this possibility, it was imperative to avoid wasting the jack to drive out a lone heart honor which would have to be played anyway.

Race drivers given brief for 500-miler

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Officials of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway and United States Auto Club today called together the 33 drivers in Saturday's 500-mile auto race to explain the "old-fashioned" start.

Under the old system, the 33 cars were lined up at the starting line with dead engines. Then the engines were started and the racers slowly followed the pace car until they were in proper positions. If the alignment was good, the race was on when they hit the starting line.
