BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

When you make a minimum suit response to your partner's opening bid and he gives you a single raise, you need five playing tricks to make a jump rebid at your next turn.

Mr. Abel made a jump rebid in spades in today's deal, valuing his hand at five playing tricks—three in spades and two side aces. Unfortunately his play was not as accurate as his bidding.

The four of hearts was led and his ace killed Mrs. Keen's king. The contract appeared to offer no problems; in fact the enemy might be held to a heart winner and the ace of diamonds.

Complacently, Mr. Abel led two rounds of spades, ending in his hand. He got a bad jolt when Mrs. Fusty discarded a small heart on the second spade. Now, too late, he realized the necessity of setting up dummy's diamond suit as a parking place for his two club losers.

Mrs. Fusty

He started on diamonds but Mrs. Fusty held up her ace until the third round, after winning with that card she led the eight of clubs and Mr. Abel won with the ace. He went to dummy with a trump lead and returned a good diamond. Mrs. Keen ruffed and he overruffed. But he had to lose two clubs at the end for a one-trick set.

He could have made the hand by starting on the diamonds at the second trick. Even if Mrs. Fusty won the second diamond and led another one for Mrs. Keen to ruff, 10 tricks would still be there. The defenders would get only a diamond, a diamond ruff and a heart trick.

If Mrs. Fusty waited for the third diamond lead to take her ace, she could quickly cash only one other trick, a heart. Mr. Abel could then win any lead, cash the queen of spades and lead a spade to dummy's king.

On a diamond return from the board, Mrs. Keen would have no better play than to ruff. Mr. Abel could overruff and now another spade lead would clear the trumps and put dummy in to cash a good diamond for a club discard from the closed hand.

selling price, "we recognize that our people should be in a position to enjoy the standards of living available to other Canadians and that they cannot escape their cost of living.

"I believe that salary and wage increases can be granted without worsening our competitive position but only if compensating efficiencies can be achieved."

He said some of these efficiencies can be brought about by further capital investment and more skillful management.

"Others, I contend, can most easily be achieved by union action, without worsening the working conditions of its members."

He said that a great deal of publicity had been given to struggles between unions and management.

Some differences are inevitable.

"However, we should give much greater attention to those areas where unions and management can work with complete interests."

He said he believed that if both companies and unions developed mature and thoughtful leadership, "together they will be able to make a real contribution to the stability and progress of our industry.

"Certainly, the fortunes of all employees, management, salaried and hourly, will rise or fall with the fortunes of the company for which they work."

Mr. Beaupre was introduced by Watson Island mill manager John Guthrie.

Britons irate over reports on Canada

TORONTO (CP)—Britons in Canada reacted hotly Monday to reports from London that many of their countrymen here were combing garbage for feed, sleeping on bare floors and lining up at soup kitchens.

The report was published in a British newspaper, The People, which touched off a similar controversy two years ago.

The newspaper, under the heading "No Jobs — and now Bread Lines," said Canada faced its worst unemployment crisis since the 30s and still hundreds of Britons were sailing monthly.

"Yet immigrants are among those who line up in soup queues, beg a night's loging on the bare floors of mission buildings and even comb garbage for food left-overs.

John Bunker, president of the Overseas League in Toronto, said the Press Council, unofficial watchdog of British journalism, should investigate the report. He described it as "so desperately biased that it's outright distortion."

Ivor Jones, president of the British Emigration Goodwill Association, Incorporated: "I think this must be the work of the small segment of loud-mouth malcontents who are less than five per cent of the immigrants returning home. There's no danger of anyone being cut out on the street or starving here."
